Diplomatic Corps Is Arguing Embassy Liquor Rights

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Official Washington grew dizzy today trying to watch prohibition developments on half a dozen sectors.

The diplomatic corps is in a wrangle over embassy liquors, the newly created law enforcement commission is under fire for executive sessions, congress is girding for a new struggle on prohibition reorganization in the regular session, and dry leaders are searching for ways and means of giving aid and comfort to the beleaguered enforcement commission.

Following President Hoover's special message recommending consolidation of the prohibition enforcement units, wets and drys on Capitol Hill planned their campaigns for another calling of the ayes and nays on Volsteadism.

Although the vote will come chiefly upon the proposal to transfer the entire prohibition machinery from the treasury to the justice departments, the legislative processes necessary to produce the bill will open the floodgates of prohibition debate on both houses of congress.

Everything that has been said before, for or against prohibition, will be said again, first in committee hearings, then from the floors of both houses. Wet spokesmen already have declared their intention to oppose the administration program. The drys, who have advocated the transfer for five years, will steer the legislation through congress. They claim a safe majority in both houses, which is generally conceded them in political circles.

President Hoover promised the prohibition re-organization during the campaign, but did not wish to press the matter in the special session of congress.

With the administration program well on the way to final achievement in congress, the president, in his special message, recommended appointment of a joint committee of the house and senate to prepare the transfer legislation. The White House will appoint a committee representing the various government departments interested to co-operate with the congressional committee. Both bodies will have at their call all the resources of the newly created law enforcement commission.

The president's message was dictated by a desire "to secure the utmost expedition in the reorganization and concentration of responsibility" in prohibition enforcement.

"As the question embraces numerous laws and regulations in several bureaus, it will require extensive consideration, which, if given jointly by such committees of the congress and the departments prior to the regular sessions, will save many months of delay," the president's message said.

ATTORNEY GENERAL ASSISTANT LEAVES

WASHINGTON, June 7.—The justice department announced the retirement of John Marshall, of West Virginia, as assistant attorney general in charge of administration affairs of the department, effective today.

Charles P. Sisson, of Rhode Island, recently appointed to succeed Marshall, will take office about June 11.

REFUSE TO REOPEN COAL RATE DISPUTE

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Petitions of the western Pennsylvania coal traffic bureau and the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad which asked reopening of the lake cargo rate controversy were denied today by the interstate commerce commission.

The two petitions were opposed by coal operators in southern fields who asked the commission to permit present compromise rates to continue in effect.

YOUNG GIRL AMAZES MAGICIANS AT LIMA BLACK ART MEETING

Little Miss Performs Like Veteran In Stage Debut

LIMA, June 7.—One is to be surprised at nothing that may happen in this mystical town, with 1,600 members of the International Brotherhood of Magicians gathered here.

But with two days of the convention past, the sensation of the whole show came last night when a little freckle-faced, snubby-nosed girl, barely 12 years old, performed feats of the black art that opened the eyes of the assembled baldheads. She is Miss Roberta Byron, Philadelphia school girl, and it was Roberta's first appearance before a large public audience.

With bare knees, brown as berries from romping in the streets, Roberta crossed the stage with the grace of a veteran of the footlights and made a childish little courtesy. The audience, largely professional magicians, observed curiously. Two large bouquets, one for the ladies, one for the gentlemen, she extracted with uncanny deftness from a whisp of a silk shawl. Then she passed her red handkerchief through her hand and it emerged green.

Then she picked silver coins out of the atmosphere with the skill of T. Nelson, veteran "king of koins" himself. Like Downs, she dropped them in a silver bucket—two hands full. Then she waved her hands over the bucket. They vanished. One by one they re-appeared in her hand to be dropped into the bucket again. The bald heads began to lean forward in their seats.

She handled wooden balls with the same eerie dexterity. They multiplied in her tiny hands. Disappeared again. Changed colors. Last of all she rubbed her hands together and materialized a large American flag.

Little could be learned of little "Roberta, dainty miss of mystery," as she was billed. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Byron. Her father is a prominent Philadelphia lawyer. The parents, quiet folks, not magically inclined, brought her to Lima.

The child prodigy became interested in magic when barely of school age. She begged for books and instruction until her parents finally consented. They got Jim Barton, known years ago as "El Barto," the magician, to teach her. Old El Barto, dean of the old school of magicians, was perhaps the proudest man in Lima as his child student swept the audience off their feet.

The I. B. M. convention closes tonight with a third performance and a final business meeting, at which the city for the next meeting will be chosen and new officers elected.

WOMAN KILLED IN TRAIN LEAP

COLUMBUS, O., June 7.—Betty Steinbach, believed to have been from Pittsburgh, was killed in a leap from a Pennsylvania passenger train at Lewisville, Ind., last night, division officers of the Pennsylvania announced here today.

Pennsylvania officials said Miss Steinbach was a neurotic and with another patient was being taken from California to Pittsburgh by a trained nurse whose name was given as Mrs. Wayte.

The name of the second patient was not learned. She and Mrs. Wayte proceeded to Pittsburgh.

Search for Miss Steinbach was started after she went to the womens' rest room and failed to return. She had leaped or fallen from an open window and her body was found along the tracks.

AIR PASSENGER KILLED

MARIETTA, O., June 7.—Richard Chinn, 21, is dead at Parkersburg, W. Va., from injuries received when an airplane, in which he was a passenger, crashed near here. O. G. Seevers, 28, Parkersburg, pilot of the ship, was slightly hurt.

ARREST COUNT IN DRY RAID

SUSPECT IN MURDER CASE STILL EVADES CAPTURE BY POLICE

Manhunters Unable To Find Trace Of Radio Man

SAN FRANCISCO, June 7.—Manhunters deployed over the Pacific Coast today searching for William L. Tallman, handsome radio operator, wanted in connection with the "clothes closet" murder of Mrs. Virginia Patty in Los Angeles.

Tallman disappeared mysteriously from the liner Admiral Benson where he had been held on a radio warrant, when the ship docked yesterday.

Unable to find a single clue that possibly might lead to the whereabouts or the fate of Tallman, local authorities have enlisted the aid of those of other cities, hoping the youth may be captured and the murder of pretty Mrs. Patty solved.

Placed under guard by Capt. M. A. Sohst of the Admiral Benson upon the strength of a radio warrant from Los Angeles authorities, Tallman was missing from his stateroom when the ship docked.

He had unscrewed part of the lock on the inside of the room; had slipped past the crewman on guard and disappeared.

It was thought Tallman may have jumped overboard and swam ashore; that he may have taken his life in the Pacific; that he may still be hiding aboard ship.

A few scraps of paper which, when pieced together, indicated they may have formed a "farewell" note from the missing man to his father, were found in a wastebasket in his room.

It is thought perhaps some of his former crew mates may be hiding him aboard the vessel; unwilling even to desert a "pal" suspected of murdering a woman.

The body of Mrs. Patty, wife of a Portland, Ore., financier and only 25 years of age, was found hanging by a scarf in a clothes closet in a Los Angeles apartment last Tuesday. She had been beaten to death with a brick, her dress pulled over her head and the body suspended from a clothes hanger.

TOLEDO MAN IS SHOT TO DEATH DESPITE PLEAS

Daughter Witness Of Father's Murder By Unknown Men

TOLEDO, O., June 7.—Earle S. Bracker, 38, was shot to death by two unidentified assailants early today as he pleaded for his life.

The murder was witnessed by Bracker's 11-year-old daughter, Rita Jane, who was awakened by the sound of scuffling and saw her father standing in the driveway confronted by two men.

"Don't! Don't shoot," the little girl said her father pleaded.

At this juncture Bracker shouted for police and two shots were fired. As he fell to the driveway his assailants ran to the curb, jumped into an automobile and sped away.

Two suspects, whose descriptions answered those of the gunmen, were taken into custody a few hours later and will be questioned later today.

Detective John Hovey, after an investigation, said robbery was not the motive for the slaying. He blamed liquor interests and asserted Bracker made frequent trips to Detroit and Canada.

Bracker had just returned from another trip to Detroit when he was accosted. Hovey said he had been threatened before.

Bracker's wife, Dorothy, slept through the tragedy.

RUTH WILL RETURN TO GAME IN 10 DAYS

NEW YORK, June 7—Babe Ruth declared today he was feeling "fine and fit," and predicted that he would be "as good as ever in ten days."

His statement answered reports that he was suffering from a weakened heart which might put him out of the Yankee's lineup for a month or perhaps even for the whole season.

Ruth denied that he was in a serious condition.

"Tell the boys at the Yankee Stadium that I'll be on the job in ten days anyway," he said.

CEDARVILLE GRADUATES TOLD NOT TO BE SNOBS BY SPEAKER

"We simply must not have intellectual snobs."

That was the assertion made by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Chicago, Ill., area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, former president of De Pauw University at Greencastle, Ind., who deivered the commencement address at the thirty-ninth annual graduation exercises of Cedarville College before a large audience at the Cedarville Opera House Friday morning.

Bishop Hughes deviated from his address on the subject, "The Perils of Knowledge," to score the advice of Robert Emmons Rogers, associate professor of English of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, last week. Prof. Rogers told the graduates of that school: "Be snobs. It is just as easy to marry the boss' daughter as his stenographer."

In his introductory remarks, the commencement speaker declared that a false relation to knowledge is a peril but that no kowledge at all is a worse peril. He declared that gravitation is what makes life safe but that any law of safety may be a peril.

Religion, he said, is not always safe but must be used with caution. Religion is most dangerous when misused.

Four main points were stressed by the speaker, including: 1—Self-consciousness; 2—Don't be critical of your fellow men; 3—Tendency to think of knowledge as a substitute for character; 4—Knowledge is not an end in itself.

"Just because you have a college degree is no excuse for not using your knowledge and ability," he told the seniors.

"There is only one really worth while harvest and that is the crop of youth. There is no connection between knowledge and moral and spiritual character."

Asserting that "a diploma only makes your obligations greater" Bishop Hughes gave this parting advice to the graduates: "Use knowledge for the sake of a great race and country."

Degrees were conferred on seventee graduates and diplomas were awarded to fourteen other students who completed the two-year normal course by Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of the college.

The college also awarded diplo-

THINK LINDBERGHS HEADED FOR MORROW PROPERTY IN MAINE

Yacht Proceeds By Easy Stages Up Eastern Coast

KENNEBUNKPORT, Me., June 7.—The little motor yacht Mouette lay at anchor in Cape Porposie Harbor, two miles east of here, today, and it was known definitely that aboard were the elusive honeymooners, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Proceeding up the Atlantic coast by easy stages, apparently bound for the Morrow estate at North Haven, Me., the newlyweds kept the world in doubt for ten days after their sudden marriage at Englewood, N. J.

But early last night, when the trim cabin cruiser put into York Harbor, a few miles south of here, for fuel, the happy bridegroom appeared on deck and faced a crowd of 100 villagers without attempting to hide his identity.

His bridge, the former Anne Morrow, remained in one of the Mouette's two cabins, and townsfolk speculated as to whether she might be seasick. The water outside the harbor was choppy.

PREDICTS MEN TO SHOW LEGS

NEW YORK, June 7.—John David has cemented the following written prediction on men's clothes in 2029 into the corner stone of his new building here.

Aviators will wear colored flying suits, imitating the brilliance of birds.

Men will wear "shorts" for every occasion except formal ones, with the leg uncovered from the ankle to the knee.

Coats will disappear.

The upper part of the body will be covered with a garment that will be a combination jacket and shirt.

All clothing will be porous or mesh-woven.

Formal dress will include silk satin breeches.

NEGRO ACCUSED OF ATTACKING GIRLS

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 7.—Robert McGee, 44, Negro laborer, was under arrest here today, charged with attacking Catherine Abrams, 13, and her cousin, Darlene Riley, 14, both white. The Negro was said to have enticed the girls to his home with money and fruit. The Abrams girl is from Columbus and has been making her home with an aunt here. Police said the girls were with McGee when they entered his house. Neighbors said they saw the girls go into the house on several nights.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST "HIGHER-UPS" SEEN IN LIQUOR CAPTURE

French Nobleman On Bail; Denies He Is Conspirator

NEW YORK, June 7.—The arrest of Count Maxence Thomas Marie Joseph Michael De Poligna as the alleged European representative of a liquor syndicate that supplied New York millionaires was revealed today as the opening drive of a campaign which prohibition agents will wage against "higher-ups."

The count, who was seized yesterday while in the bathtub at his suite in the exclusive Savoy-Plaza Hotel, was free on $25,000 bail today along with thirty-two other men who were arrested with him in one of the most sensational prohibition raids ever staged here.

Count De Polignac denied he intended to sell any of the $150,000 worth of liquor found at several points in Manhattan and Brooklyn. He said liquor which was found in his room was for his personal use and for friends whom he expected to meet in sailing tonight on the liner Paris.

William J. Calhoun, chief of undercover prohibition agents here, was authority for the statement that his forces had started a campaign against the "rulers" of the liquor traffic. That gave rise to the belief that indictments against Count de Polignac and the persons arrested with him would be sought under the Jones law which provides a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Count de Polignac seemed unconcerned about his arrest. He talked freely, explained he was manager of foreign agents for Pommeri and Grenot, champagne manufacturers, and had come to New York from Canada only to sail on the Paris.

Dispatches from Washington, however, quoted Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement, as saying the count had been suspected of bringing large quantities of liquor into the country and that prohibition agents had "been trying to get him for a long time."

The Almanach de Gotha sets forth that the De Polignac family has been traced accurately to the ninth century.

RENEW SEARCH FOR ESCAPED CONVICTS

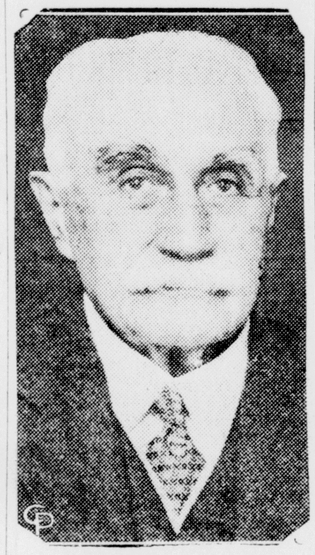

CIRCLEVILLE, O., June 7.—Guardsmen and posses, with bloodhounds, again took up today the search for the three convicts who escaped from the state brick plant at Junction City Tuesday.

The prisoners were discovered a mile east of here late yesterday when Mrs. William Robinson, whose home rests on the bank of the creek, went to the creek to dispose of some refuse.

The men, one of them only partially clad, fled at Mrs. Robinson's approach and believing they were the escaped convicts she summoned guards and poice.

Before dusk more than 100 men and women, armed with guns and clubs, searched within a four mile radius without results, bloodhounds were brought into play but were unable to follow out the trail.

INVENTOR ILL

Charles F. Brush, 80-year-old inventor of the arc light, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia at his Cleveland, O., home. In addition to the arc lamp, which he invented in 1878, Brush perfected other devices essential to modern electrical engineering.

BUCKLEY AWAITING ACTION OF FEDERAL COURT OF APPEALS

Deny Reports That Prisoner Shouted Threat

CINCINNATI, O., June 7.—Former State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley was back at his home in Dayton today, awaiting action of the federal circuit court of appeals on his request that his appeal be reinstated.

Buckley is under sentence to two and one-half years in the federal penitentiary on charges of conspiring to offer a bribe and violate the national prohibition laws.

The former treasurer and his attorneys appeared in appeal court here yesterday to challenge a move by District Attorney Haveth E. Mau to have his appeal dismissed because it was not perfected, as required by law, with the legal time limit.

The attorneys admitted the appeal was not perfected, through an office error, and the court took the request under advisement. Buckley, meantime, was ordered to file briefs supporting his request.

Should the request be denied he must enter the penitentiary immediately.

Mau and Buckley's attorneys reiterated today that Buckley, contrary to dispatches carried by press associations other than the United Press, did not get up in court and shout: "If I'm railroaded to prison, I'll take my persecutor with me."

Buckley was quoted extensively today as having made the statement, but general denials were issued and Mau, in particular, pointed out that such a statement, coming in open court, would prejudice, rather than help, Buckley's case.

TRAINS JUMP TRACK

BLANCHESTER, O., June 7.—Wrecking crews today were clearing the B. and O. right-of-way at Midland City where last night two passenger trains were derailed. The wreck occurred when one coach of train No. 36, Cincinnati to Pittsburgh, jumped the track and crashed into train No. 22, Cincinnati to New York, running eastbound on a parallel track. No one was seriously injured although passengers were shaken up. Eight cars were derailed.

FURNACE TENDER WINS CASH

Has Manager And Two Body Guards On Trip To Collect $84,750 For $1 Race Ticket

CLEVELAND, O., June 7.—Accompanied by a manager, two body guards and an extra shirt, Arthur Court, the Indianapolis furnace tender, who paid $1 for a winning ticket on the English derby, was on his way to Quebec today to collect his $84,750.

Court stopped in Cleveland last night, surrounded on all sides by his entourage of three. His new blue serge suit was baggy at the knees. He wore tan button shoes and a cap, and shifted his tall and angular frame about restlessly as he disposed of requests for interviews.

"You'll have to talk to my manager," he said.

The manager, dressed in a brown suit and resembling a wrestler in his body structure, rubbed his nose and responded:

"We're not saying a word—why should we talk, I ask you."

Then Court relented and said:

"Well, I'm just making a trip to collect my money."

"Just packed an extra shirt and got away at once—"

The lottery winner seemed started toward a real discussion when his manager broke in.

"Hush, hush," interjected that gentleman. "We ain't saying anything."

"We're afraid a crowd is following us," he said.

Later he went back to the station and bought tickets for Toronto.

The explanation mystified the attendants, for a few porters, late travelers and loungers who gazed without interest at the bustling quartet were the only "crowd" in sight.

LATERAN TREATY IS RATIFIED AT RITES FRIDAY MORNING

Vatican City Now; Long Dispute Is Ended In Peace

VATICAN CITY, June 7—The papacy became a temporal state today for the first time since the Italian army marched through Porta Pia on September 20, 1870, to end an uninterrupted temporal reign which had lasted from the days of Charlemagne.

Vatican City became a reality at 11 a. m. today with the exchange of ratifications of the Lateran treaty, which once more re-established relations between the kingdom of Italy and the Holy See.

The ceremony took place in the hall of congregation in the Vatican palace. Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, acted for Pope Pius XI. Benito Mussolini, premier of Italy, represented King Victor Emmanuel III and the Italian people. The pontiff was not present.

It was announced shortly before the exchange of ratifications that Mgr. Borgongini-Duca, hitherto papal secretary for extraordinary affairs, would go to Rome as the first papal muncio of Italy.

The exchange of ratifications marked an end, for the time being at least, to the talk of a new controversy over the age-old Roman problem.

It was even predicted at one time in certain quarters that the ratification never would be signed. All of Ltaly was stirred afresh over the developments which arose from an open letter by the pope to his secretary of state, published in the semi-official Vatican organ Osservatore Romano, in which the pontiff took issue with certain of the utterances made by Mussolini before the chamber of deputies last month.

The pope took issue principally with the contention of the premier that to the state alone belonged the right of educating the younger generations of the land. The pope contended that from the very earliest times of the Catholic church it was to the church that the people looked for their education and that they should continue to do so now.

It was expected that Mussolini would make an answer to the contentions of the pontiff and to the charges that certain of the premier's statements were more than heretical.

The ceremonies today were accompanied by medieval pomp and a touch of military tradition. A spirit of carnival and parade hovered over the Vatican city throughout the morning.

All the regular armed forces of the Pope were dressed in their full dress uniforms and assigned to specific places long before the Italian delegation arrived. Three detachments of Swiss guards, tra-

Students to graduated with special honors in particular branches of study include Wendell R. Koch, Dayton, "with distinction in physics" and Emerson T. Squire, Ashville, "with high distinction in romance languages."

DISTILLERY FOUND BY POLICE WRECKED

CLEVELAND, June 7.—A completely equipped distillery was practically wrecked by the special liquor squad under Police Sergeant John Mack in a raid on the east side late Thursday. The liquor squad, with the assistance of firemen found two 100-gallon stills and two seventy-five-gallon stills in the plant, a two story structure which formerly had been a house. The raiders also found twenty barrels of mash and approximately 600 gallons of the distilled product.

Daughter Witness Of Father's Murder By Unknown Men

TOLEDO, O., June 7.—Earle S. Bracker, 38, was shot to death by two unidentified assailants early today as he pleaded for his life.

The murder was witnessed by Bracker's 11-year-old daughter, Rita Jane, who was awakened by the sound of scuffling and saw her father standing in the driveway confronted by two men.

"Don't! Don't shoot," the little girl said her father pleaded.

At this juncture Bracker shouted for police and two shots were fired. As he fell to the driveway his assailants ran to the curb, jumped into an automobile and sped away.

Two suspects, whose descriptions answered those of the gunmen, were taken into custody a few hours later and will be questioned later today.

Detective John Hovey, after an investigation, said robbery was not the motive for the slaying. He blamed liquor interests and asserted Bracker made frequent trips to Detroit and Canada.

Bracker had just returned from another trip to Detroit when he was accosted. Hovey said he had been threatened before.

Bracker's wife, Dorothy, slept through the tragedy.

RUTH WILL RETURN TO GAME IN 10 DAYS

NEW YORK, June 7—Babe Ruth declared today he was feeling "fine and fit," and predicted that he would be "as good as ever in ten days."

His statement answered reports that he was suffering from a weakened heart which might put him out of the Yankee's lineup for a month or perhaps even for the whole season.

Ruth denied that he was in a serious condition.

"Tell the boys at the Yankee Stadium that I'll be on the job in ten days anyway," he said.

CEDARVILLE GRADUATES TOLD NOT TO BE SNOBS BY SPEAKER

"We simply must not have intellectual snobs."

That was the assertion made by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, of the Chicago, Ill., area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, former president of De Pauw University at Greencastle, Ind., who deivered the commencement address at the thirty-ninth annual graduation exercises of Cedarville College before a large audience at the Cedarville Opera House Friday morning.

Bishop Hughes deviated from his address on the subject, "The Perils of Knowledge," to score the advice of Robert Emmons Rogers, associate professor of English of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, last week. Prof. Rogers told the graduates of that school: "Be snobs. It is just as easy to marry the boss' daughter as his stenographer."

In his introductory remarks, the commencement speaker declared that a false relation to knowledge is a peril but that no kowledge at all is a worse peril. He declared that gravitation is what makes life safe but that any law of safety may be a peril.

Religion, he said, is not always safe but must be used with caution. Religion is most dangerous when misused.

Four main points were stressed by the speaker, including: 1—Self-consciousness; 2—Don't be critical of your fellow men; 3—Tendency to think of knowledge as a substitute for character; 4—Knowledge is not an end in itself.

"Just because you have a college degree is no excuse for not using your knowledge and ability," he told the seniors.

"There is only one really worth while harvest and that is the crop of youth. There is no connection between knowledge and moral and spiritual character."

Asserting that "a diploma only makes your obligations greater" Bishop Hughes gave this parting advice to the graduates: "Use knowledge for the sake of a great race and country."

Degrees were conferred on seventee graduates and diplomas were awarded to fourteen other students who completed the two-year normal course by Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of the college.

The college also awarded diplo-

PREDICTS MEN TO SHOW LEGS

NEW YORK, June 7.—John David has cemented the following written prediction on men's clothes in 2029 into the corner stone of his new building here.

Aviators will wear colored flying suits, imitating the brilliance of birds.

Men will wear "shorts" for every occasion except formal ones, with the leg uncovered from the ankle to the knee.

Coats will disappear.

The upper part of the body will be covered with a garment that will be a combination jacket and shirt.

All clothing will be porous or mesh-woven.

Formal dress will include silk satin breeches.

THINK LINDBERGHS HEADED FOR MORROW PROPERTY IN MAINE

Yacht Proceeds By Easy Stages Up Eastern Coast

KENNEBUNKPORT, Me., June 7.—The little motor yacht Mouette lay at anchor in Cape Porpoise Harbor, two miles east of here, today, and it was known definitely that aboard were the elusive honeymooners, Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Proceeding up the Atlantic coast by easy stages, apparently bound for the Morrow estate at North Haven, Me., the newlyweds kept the world in doubt for ten days after their sudden marriage at Englewood, N. J.

But early last night, when the trim cabin cruiser put into York Harbor, a few miles south of here, for fuel, the happy bridegroom appeared on deck and faced a crowd of 100 villagers without attempting to hide his identity.

His bridge, the former Anne Morrow, remained in one of the Mouette's two cabins, and townsfolk speculated as to whether she might be seasick. The water outside the harbor was choppy.

NEGRO ACCUSED OF ATTACKING GIRLS

PORTSMOUTH, O., June 7.—Robert McGee, 44, Negro laborer, was under arrest here today, charged with attacking Catherine Abrams, 13, and her cousin, Darlene Riley, 14, both white. The Negro was said to have enticed the girls to his home with money and fruit. The Abrams girl is from Columbus and has been making her home with an aunt here. Police said the girls were with McGee when they entered his house. Neighbors said they saw the girls go into the house on several nights.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST "HIGHER-UPS" SEEN IN LIQUOR CAPTURE

French Nobleman On Bail; Denies He Is Conspirator

NEW YORK, June 7.—The arrest of Count Maxence Thomas Marie Joseph Michael De Poligna as the alleged European representative of a liquor syndicate that supplied New York millionaires was revealed today as the opening drive of a campaign which prohibition agents will wage against "higher-ups."

The count, who was seized yesterday while in the bathtub at his suite in the exclusive Savoy-Plaza Hotel, was free on $25,000 bail today along with thirty-two other men who were arrested with him in one of the most sensational prohibition raids ever staged here.

Count De Polignac denied he intended to sell any of the $150,000 worth of liquor found at several points in Manhattan and Brooklyn. He said liquor which was found in his room was for his personal use and for friends whom he expected to meet in sailing tonight on the liner Paris.

William J. Calhoun, chief of undercover prohibition agents here, was authority for the statement that his forces had started a campaign against the "rulers" of the liquor traffic. That gave rise to the belief that indictments against Count de Polignac and the persons arrested with him would be sought under the Jones law which provides a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Count de Polignac seemed unconcerned about his arrest. He talked freely, explained he was manager of foreign agents for Pommeri and Grenot, champagne manufacturers, and had come to New York from Canada only to sail on the Paris.

Dispatches from Washington, however, quoted Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement, as saying the count had been suspected of bringing large quantities of liquor into the country and that prohibition agents had "been trying to get him for a long time."

The Almanach de Gotha sets forth that the De Polignac family has been traced accurately to the ninth century.

RENEW SEARCH FOR ESCAPED CONVICTS

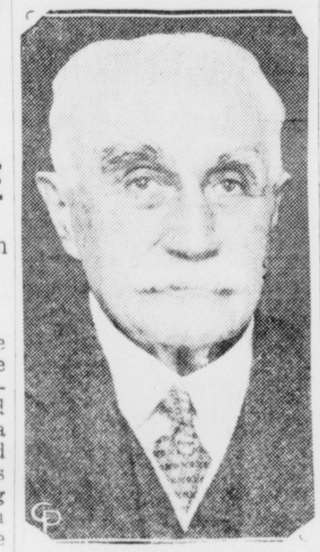

CIRCLEVILLE, O., June 7.—Guardsmen and posses, with bloodhounds, again took up today the search for the three convicts who escaped from the state brick plant at Junction City Tuesday.

The prisoners were discovered a mile east of here late yesterday when Mrs. William Robinson, whose home rests on the bank of the creek, went to the creek to dispose of some refuse.

The men, one of them only partially clad, fled at Mrs. Robinson's approach and believing they were the escaped convicts she summoned guards and poice.

Before dusk more than 100 men and women, armed with guns and clubs, searched within a four mile radius without results, bloodhounds were brought into play but were unable to follow out the trail.

BUCKLEY AWAITING ACTION OF FEDERAL COURT OF APPEALS

Deny Reports That Prisoner Shouted Threat

CINCINNATI, O., June 7.—Former State Treasurer Bert B. Buckley was back at his home in Dayton today, awaiting action of the federal circuit court of appeals on his request that his appeal be reinstated.

Buckley is under sentence to two and one-half years in the federal penitentiary on charges of conspiring to offer a bribe and violate the national prohibition laws.

The former treasurer and his attorneys appeared in appeal court here yesterday to challenge a move by District Attorney Haveth E. Mau to have his appeal dismissed because it was not perfected, as required by law, with the legal time limit.

The attorneys admitted the appeal was not perfected, through an office error, and the court took the request under advisement. Buckley, meantime, was ordered to file briefs supporting his request.

Should the request be denied he must enter the penitentiary immediately.

Mau and Buckley's attorneys reiterated today that Buckley, contrary to dispatches carried by press associations other than the United Press, did not get up in court and shout: "If I'm railroaded to prison, I'll take my persecutor with me."

Buckley was quoted extensively today as having made the statement, but general denials were issued and Mau, in particular, pointed out that such a statement, coming in open court, would prejudice, rather than help, Buckley's case.

TRAINS JUMP TRACK

BLANCHESTER, O., June 7.—Wrecking crews today were clearing the B. and O. right-of-way at Midland City where last night two passenger trains were derailed. The wreck occurred when one coach of train No. 36, Cincinnati to Pittsburgh, jumped the track and crashed into train No. 22, Cincinnati to New York, running eastbound on a parallel track. No one was seriously injured although passengers were shaken up. Eight cars were derailed.

FURNACE TENDER WINS CASH

Has Manager And Two Body Guards On Trip To Collect $84,750 For $1 Race Ticket

CLEVELAND, O., June 7.—Accompanied by a manager, two body guards and an extra shirt, Arthur Court, the Indianapolis furnace tender, who paid $1 for a winning ticket on the English derby, was on his way to Quebec today to collect his $84,750.

Court stopped in Cleveland last night, surrounded on all sides by his entourage of three. His new blue serge suit was baggy at the knees. He wore tan button shoes and a cap, and shifted his tall and angular frame about restlessly as he disposed of requests for interviews.

"You'll have to talk to my manager," he said.

The manager, dressed in a brown suit and resembling a wrestler in his body structure, rubbed his nose and responded:

"We're not saying a word—why should we talk, I ask you."

Then Court relented and said:

"Well, I'm just making a trip to collect my money."

The lottery winner seemed started toward a real discussion when his manager broke in.

"Hush, hush," interjected that gentleman. "We ain't saying anything."

"We're afraid a crowd is following us," he said.

Later he went back to the station and bought tickets for Toronto.

The explanation mystified the attendants, for a few porters, late travelers and loungers who gazed without interest at the bustling quartet were the only "crowd" in sight.

Vatican City Now; Long Dispute Is Ended In Peace

VATICAN CITY, June 7.—The papacy became a temporal state today for the first time since the Italian army marched through Porta Pia on September 20, 1870, to end an uninterrupted temporal reign which had lasted from the days of Charlemagne.

Vatican City became a reality at 11 a. m. today with the exchange of ratifications of the Lateran treaty, which once more re-established relations between the kingdom of Italy and the Holy See.

The ceremony took place in the hall of congregation in the Vatican palace. Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, acted for Pope Pius XI. Benito Mussolini, premier of Italy, represented King Victor Emmanuel III and the Italian people. The pontiff was not present.

It was announced shortly before the exchange of ratifications that Mgr. Borgongini-Duca, hitherto papal secretary for extraordinary affairs, would go to Rome as the first papal muncio of Italy.

The exchange of ratifications marked an end, for the time being at least, to the talk of a new controversy over the age-old Roman problem.

It was even predicted at one time in certain quarters that the ratification never would be signed. All of Ltaly was stirred afresh over the developments which arose from an open letter by the pope to his secretary of state, published in the semi-official Vatican organ Osservatore Romano, in which the pontiff took issue with certain of the utterances made by Mussolini before the chamber of deputies last month.

The pope took issue principally with the contention of the premier that to the state alone belonged the right of educating the younger generations of the land. The pope contended that from the very earliest times of the Catholic church it was to the church that the people looked for their education and that they should continue to do so now.

It was expected that Mussolini would make an answer to the contentions of the pontiff and to the charges that certain of the premier's statements were more than heretical.

The ceremonies today were accompanied by medieval pomp and a touch of military tradition. A spirit of carnival and parade hovered over the Vatican city throughout the morning.

All the regular armed forces of the Pope were dressed in their full dress uniforms and assigned to specific places long before the Italian delegation arrived. Three detachments of Swiss guards, tra-

SPECIAL HONORS FOR GRADUATES

COLUMBUS, O., June 7.—Twenty-five members of the graduating class of Ohio State University, will receive their diplomas with honors from the college of liberal arts at the commencement Tuesday, it was announced today. Four of the twenty-five will be graduated with two degrees, and six others "with distinction" in special branches of study.

Those to be graduated "with honors" and with the degree of bachelor of arts include Jean Cunningham, Dayton; Donald F. Hyde, Chillicothe; Brooks McCracken, Lancaster; Casimer J. Munter, Canton; Harvey Rush, Greenville; Margaret E. Spindler, Dayton and Emerson T. Squire, Ashville.

Students to graduated with special honors in particular branches of study include Wendell R. Koch, Dayton, "with distinction in physics" and Emerson T. Squire, Ashville, "with high distinction in romance languages."

DISTILLERY FOUND BY POLICE WRECKED

CLEVELAND, June 7.—A completely equipped distillery was practically wrecked by the special liquor squad under Police Sergeant John Mack in a raid on the east side late Thursday. The liquor squad, with the assistance of firemen found two 100-gallon stills and two seventy-five-gallon stills in the plant, a two story structure which formerly had been a house. The raiders also found twenty barrels of mash and approximately 600 gallons of the distilled product.

AWARD DIVIDED

ASHLAND, O., June 7.—The annual John C. Myers award at Ashland College was divided this year between Glenn Workman and Miss Betty Junk. The award is for scholarship and amounts to $100 in cash. The John Lichty award of $50 for scholarship was given to Ralph Richards. The Ira C. Wilcox award was won by Lloyd Shirey.

The guards formed one great splash of color in the courtyard. The medieval uniforms which were designed for the vatican by the great Michael Angelo himself, furnished the traditional picturesqueness to the setting, with their red, yellow and blue shirts and their shining halberds.

As the Italian delegates entered the papal grounds through Cortile St. Damasco, which is the main courtyard of the vatican palace, from there they climbed the Scala Regia to the second floor of the palace.

About an hour before the announcement of the exchange of ratification took place Pope Pius telegraphed his greetings to the king.

The pope's telegram bestowed the first apostolic benediction on the House of Savoy since 1870.

Antonio Mosconi, minister of finance, whose function was to deliver the documents fulfilling the financial arrangements of the treaty, arrived shortly afterward. The Italian delegation was completed by Alfredo Rocco, minister of justice.

The Vatican was represented by Cardinal Gasparri, Monsignor Borgongini-Duca, Monsignor Pi Ardo and Monsignor Francesco Pacelli, the Vatican attorney who played an important part in the negotiations leading up to the settlement.

Mosconi carried documents crediting the Holy See with 750,000,000 lire ($39,472,500) in the Bank of Italy, and 1,000,000,000 lire ($52,630,000) in Italian state bonds, the first coupon falling due on June 30.

A check and the bonds were handed to Cardinal Gasparri by Mosconi. The money represented the financial settlement, nominally compensating the Vatican for its lost territory.

Mussolini and Gasparri signed receipts acknowledging the exchange of ratifications, and declaring that they would accept the treaty and concordat in the letter and spirit. The monetoufs ceremony was then complete, and after the exchange of felicitations, Mussolini and his party left at 11:35 a. m.

Gas HEATING for the home with KIDDIES

Gas heating means an even temperature in the home regardless of the weather outside. Gas heating eliminates smoke, ashes and fuel storage. The home is more easily kept clean. Gas heating makes possible the use of the basement as a playroom for the children. When you stop to consider the many advantages the cost of gas heating is most reasonable—we will be glad to furnish you estimates.

Annual Alumni Banquet Held At Cedarville

THE Rev. Gavin Reilly, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Bradford, O., was elected president of the Cedarville College Alumni Association, succeeding the Rev. W. P. Harriman, Cedarville, at the business meeting which followed the annual banquet in Alford Memorial gymnasium Thursday night.

Other new officers elected are: Mrs. Robert Turnbull, Cedarville, first vice-president; Miss Wilma Spencer, Cedarville, second vice-president; Miss June Thompson, near Xenia, corresponding secretary; and Miss Mabel Stormont, Cedarville, recording secretary and treasurer.

Mr. William R. Collins, editor and publisher of the Bath Twp. Herald, was elected to succeed himself as the alumni representative on the college board of trustees.

It was voted to dispense with the annual alumni banquet next year. Instead a luncheon followed by a business meeting will be held on the morning following the commencement exercises.

The program opened with two vocal solos, 'All For You' and "The Old Road", by Miss Helen Iliffe, of the class of 1928, after which Chaplain G. LaClede Markle, of the class of 1925, delivered the address of welcome to the incoming class.

Miss Margaret Chandler, president of the class of 1929, gave the response.

Continuing the program ,a quartet composed of the Misses Helen Iliffe and Ruth Burns, and Messrs. Hugh Turnbull and LeClede Markle rendered two selections, "I'm Waiting For Ships That Never Come In" and "Lassie O' Mine."

Prof. A. J. Hostetler, member of the college faculty, made a talk on the subject "Education," and Dr. W. R. McChesney, college president, also gave an address.

"Goin' Home," a vocal solo by Miss Ruth Burns, of the class of 1928, brought the banquet to a close.

The menu for the banquet consisted of pressed meat, scalloped potatoes, buttered peas, rolls, butter, pineapple conserve, head lettuce with thousand island dressing, yellow sponge cake, ice cream and coffee.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the banquet was composed of Mr. William Nagley, chairman; Miss Ruth Burns, Mr. Harvey Auld and Mr. Hugh Turnbull.

BLUE RIBBON SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENTERTAINS

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Huff, Home Ave., were delightfully surprised Thursday evening when members of the Blue Ribbon Sunday School Class of the United Brethren Church, met at their home for its regular meeting.

The meeting opened with a short business session at which time plans were made for a play to be given by the class. The play selected was "Quack, Quack."

The evening was then spent in playing games and contests. Mrs. Leona Wilson, was presented the first prize and Miss Thelma Osborn the booby prize.

Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the games. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Green, Chestnut St.

"NIGHT OWL CLUB" ENTERTAINED.

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Patterson delightfully entertained the "Night Owl Club" at their home on E. Church St., Wednesday evening.

There were three tables of five hundred in play throughout the evening and Mrs. Fred Snyder and Mr. L. M. Morton were awarded the high score prizes.

The Patterson home was beautifully decorated with many bouquets of June roses and honeysuckle. Vases of rose buds centered the tables at which refreshments of strawberry shortcake with whipped cream, coffee and candy were served.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Morton, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Huston, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bogart, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Bean, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Snyder and the host and hostess.

The Children's Day program of the New Jasper M. E. Church will be held Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Rev. W. N. Mantle will also hold a baptismal service for children and infants.

Mrs. Estella Steele, E. Third St., slipped and fell on the pavement near her home Tuesday afternoon and broke her left arm. The fracture was set by Drs. H. C. Messenger and R. R. McClellan.

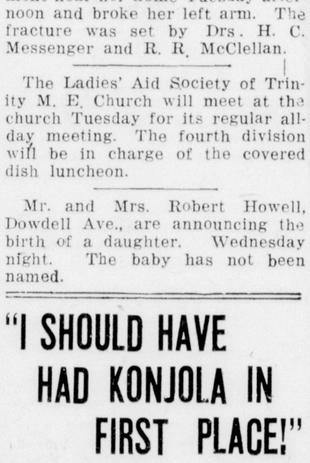

The Ladies' Aid Society of Trinity M. E. Church will meet at the church Tuesday for its regular all-day meeting. The fourth division will be in charge of the covered dish luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Howell, Dowdell Ave., are announcing the birth of a daughter. Wednesday night. The baby has not been named.

"I SHOULD HAVE HAD KONJOLA IN FIRST PLACE!"

Grateful Man, 71, Freed From Double Ailment By New Medicine, Praises It Highly

"Although I am seventy-one years old, Konjola won a splendid victory in my stubborn case," said Mr. John Dean, 160 Clarendon Ave., Columbus. "My liver and kidneys were in a bad condition for some time. I was subject to dizzy spells, and spots appeared before my eyes. I had to arise three or four times a night due to bladder actions. There were pains in my back, and my ankles swelled. I could hardly put my shoes on. Constipation was another source of worry.

"I began to improve with the first bottle of Konjola, and by the time I had finished the sixth bottle I was a well man. My kidneys and liver act normally. Dizzy spells and night rising vanished. The back pains are gone, and I feel immeasurably better. I highly indorse Konjola."

Konjola is sold in Xenia at Gallaher drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

"DUSTY" MILLER SPEAKS AT HOME GRADUATION EXERCISES

Thurman "Dusty" Miller, Wilmington, delivered the commencement address at the O. S. and S. O. Home school auditorium Thursday evening when nineteen high school seniors received their diplomas.

His address was on the subject "Citizenship and Sportsmanship," and how they are compared to life. The Home band played several numbers and Miss Mattie Engle, piano instructor at the Home, gave several piano selections.

The seniors were presented their diplomas by Miss E. Jane Bailey, Wapakoneta, secretary of the board of trustees. Boys of the class were dressed in double breasted blue coats with white flannel trousers and the girls in special costumes, wearing corsages.

The graduates are: the Misses Ruth Shaffer, Gladys Sharp, Livona Skinner, Alma Stengel, Nellie Wilgus, Gertrude Scott, Trema Parker, Roberta Howell, Margaret Duceska, Grace George, Iona Cooper, Charlotte Bearup; and Stanley Baker, Ray Dawson, Robert King, Dana Moffat, Carl Schneider, Royal Schuck, Willis Smiley, Hensyl Heaton and Kenneth Elwell.

During the past week the class has been entertained with several affairs. Last Sunday evening, the baccalaureate services were held. Monday evening, the junior-senior reception; Tuesday evening was "Class Night," and on Wednesday evening Col. and Mrs. C. V. Burton entertained the graduates at dinner.

More than 300 Home pupils left by train Friday morning to spend their summer vacations with friends and relatives in various parts of the state, including Cincinnati, Springfield, Dayton, Columbus and Cleveland.

TILFORD WILL HEAD CHAUTAUQUA HERE; GUARANTORS ELECT

The Rev. William H. Tilford was re-elected president of the Xenia Chautauqua Association for 1929 at annual election of officers which featured a well-attended meeting of the eighty local chautauqua guarantors at City Hall Thursday night.

Other officers selected are: J. J. Stout, first vice-president; Miss Fannie K. Haynes, second vice-president; Mrs. W. L. Dean, secretary-treasurer.

An executive committee composed of Mrs. W. H. McGervey, G. W. Street, Miss Faye Cavanaugh Graham Bryson and Charles Bone, and a grounds committee made up of L. S. Barnes, J. H. Whitmer and Richard McClelland, were also appointed.

That the Redpath Chautauqua season for Xenia is "Just around the corner" was indicated with the arrival here Thursday of C. O. Callahan, Redpath advance representative. He has delivered chautauqua season tickets to the local officers and the chautauqua dates of July 6 to July 12, inclusive, stand out from local awnings, windows and automobiles.

Tickets were distributed to those present at the meeting and the remainder of the guarantors will receive their supply within a short time, it is announced.

The Redpath management has gone a step further this year than has been its custom, for in addition to the two headline plays usually offered, it is presenting Tamaki Miura, famous for her interpretation of the leading role in "Madame Butterfly."

Her appearance with the Chicago Civic Opera Co. and the San Carlo Opera Co. has added to the fame which already was hers when she came to America from her native Japan. Madame Miura is to be heard on chautauqua's third night, with her company of geisha girls.

Chautauqua opens with the Jugo-Slav Tamburica Orchestra, and Hilton Ira Jones with his popular scientific demonstrations.

The second day program includes Chief Strongheart and the Yakima Indian tribe, and the mystery comedy, "Three Wise Fools."

In addition to Madame Miura and her company, the third day's program includes Waldo Emerson Stephens, the brilliant young orator who toured the Redpath circuit just five years ago. This season he is to be heard in a discussion of "Facts and Fiction in Our Foreign Affairs."

On the fourth day Fern Casford, character artist, and associated instrumentalists will entertain, and Capt. "Dinnie" Upton, "big brother to a hundred thousand kids", will speak.

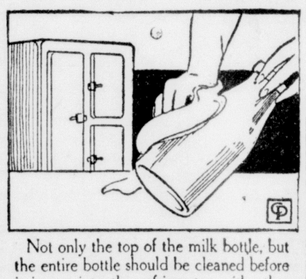

No Yong Park, Chinese author, orator and humorist, is slated for the fifth afternoon, with the comedy success, "Skidding", in the evening. This is the same play that has been running for a full year in New York City, and involves the domestic joys and sorrows of Judge Hardy and his family, in an Idaho town.

Chautauqua's closing day brings the Fairyland Frolic in the afternoon, especially for the children, with a program of magic, sand paintings, shadow pictures and surprising illusions by Henry and Company, in the evening.

SUITS BASED ON ACCIDENT SETTLED

JEFFERSON, O., June 7.—Damage suits against the New York Central Railroad, aggregating $125,950, filed as the result of an automobile accident in Conneaut, October 18, 1927, were settled out of court here today for $11,200. Two children were killed and four other members of the same family injured in the crash which occurred at the Chestnut St. crossing when the car in which they were riding was struck by a passenger train. Mrs. Elizabeth Norton, Conneaut, mother of the dead children, filed the action.

DALLAS MARSHALL

Dallas Marshall, Cedarville, a junior at Cedarville College, has accepted a position with Belden and Co., N. Detroit St., auto finance and insurance firm, in the capacity of auto insurance salesman throughout the Greene County territory. He will also sell auto club memberships.

Mr. Marshall, who is also college correspondent for The Gazette, for the last year has been in the auto insurance game for himself at Cedarville.

COUNTY DAIRY CLUB WILL MEET TUESDAY

The Greene County 4-H Dairy Club will meet in the assembly room of the Court House, Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock to reorganize and formulate plans for the coming year.

Boys and girls between the ages of ten and twenty-one may join this club and may take either the dairy calf, dairy heifers or production project in either the Jersey, Guernsey or Holstein breeds.

This club not only offers opportunity to gain knowledge and experience with dairy cattle, but also aids in the four fold development of boys and girls. Seventeen members completed the project last year and the committee recently set this year's goal at forty. The county committee is composed of Lawrence Alexander and Fred Van Tress representing the Jersey breed, S. D. Andrew the Guernsey breed and Frank Wolf the Holstein breed. Mr. Wolf is also leader of the club. All boys and girls interested are urged to attend this meeting.

HOMES AND GARDENS WILL BE DISPLAYED HERE ON SATURDAY

Homes and gardens in Yellow Springs and many Xenia gardens will be open to the public Saturday afternoon for display in connection with the local observance of "Better Homes Week," postponed from April 21 to 27, because of weather conditions.

Miss Harriet Turner, Yellow Springs, is county chairman of local activities, assisted by Mrs. Ernest Bradford, Trebeins. The exhibit is promoted by "Better Homes in America," a national organization with headquarters at Washington, D. C., of which Dr. James Ford is national director and President Herbert Hoover is honorary head.

Purpose of the organization and the public display Saturday are to promote better homes and gardens and home ownership and to call attention to ways of improving the home at a minimum cost. Furniture and modern conveniences for the home will also be displayed.

Visitors are invited to inspect the homes and gardens that will be open to the public Saturday. Yellow Springs gardens will be open to the public between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon while Xenia gardens may be visited anytime Saturday afternoon.

Visitors are invited to make the following tour in Yellow Springs: Begin at the White Hall estate, inspect the home of Mrs. Foust, then Mrs. Humphrey's garden at Elm and Walnut Sts., and the nursery school for colored children.

On Pennell St., there will be open the garden of Oliver Henry and "The Little House of Five Chimneys," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Swinnerton, will be exhibited on Phillips St. Other gardens to be open are: at the home of David Hanchett on Davis St., D. A. McGruder's garden, the faculty lawn, and the gardens of Mrs. David Fitz, Mrs. Glossinger, Mrs. Lewis Gegner and President Arthur E. Morgan on Xenia Ave.

On N. College St., may be seen the garden of C. C. Stephenson and of Mrs. Zeller, and nearby the Day house and Miss Cape's home. The nursery school laboratory will be open to the public on Livermore St., and the home of Raymond Adams, the garden of Hayes Gaines, the Matthewson home and the Garrison homestead will be exhibited, both homes and gardens.

Gardens that may be visited in Xenia are those at the home of Mrs. C. A. Kelble, 124 W. Church St., Dr. R. R. McClellan, Springfield Pike, Dr. E. A. Kern, 685 S. Detroit St., Dr. B. R. McClellan, S. Detroit St., M. L. Wolf, N. King St., John Beacham, Hill St., Thomas Corrigan, 33 Elm St., and J. H. Kepler, N. Detroit St.

"I SHOULD HAVE HAD KONJOLA IN FIRST PLACE!"

Grateful Man, 71, Freed From Double Ailment By New Medicine, Praises It Highly

"Although I am seventy-one years old, Konjola won a splendid victory in my stubborn case," said Mr. John Dean, 160 Clarendon Ave., Columbus. "My liver and kidneys were in a bad condition for some time. I was subject to dizzy spells, and spots appeared before my eyes. I had to arise three or four times a night due to bladder actions. There were pains in my back, and my ankles swelled. I could hardly put my shoes on. Constipation was another source of worry.

"I began to improve with the first bottle of Konjola, and by the time I had finished the sixth bottle I was a well man. My kidneys and liver act normally. Dizzy spells and night rising vanished. The back pains are gone, and I feel immeasurably better. I highly indorse Konjola."

"DUSTY" MILLER SPEAKS AT HOME GRADUATION EXERCISES

Thurman "Dusty" Miller, Wilmington, delivered the commencement address at the O. S. and S. O. Home school auditorium Thursday evening when nineteen high school seniors received their diplomas.

His address was on the subject "Citizenship and Sportsmanship," and how they are compared to life. The Home band played several numbers and Miss Mattie Engle, piano instructor at the Home, gave several piano selections.

The seniors were presented their diplomas by Miss E. Jane Bailey, Wapakoneta, secretary of the board of trustees. Boys of the class were dressed in double breasted blue coats with white flannel trousers and the girls in special costumes, wearing corsages.

The graduates are: the Misses Ruth Shaffer, Gladys Sharp, Livona Skinner, Alma Stengel, Nellie Wilgus, Gertrude Scott, Trema Parker, Roberta Howell, Margaret Duceska, Grace George, Iona Cooper, Charlotte Bearup; and Stanley Baker, Ray Dawson, Robert King, Dana Moffat, Carl Schneider, Royal Schuck, Willis Smiley, Hensyl Heaton and Kenneth Elwell.

During the past week the class has been entertained with several affairs. Last Sunday evening, the baccalaureate services were held. Monday evening, the junior-senior reception; Tuesday evening was "Class Night," and on Wednesday evening Col. and Mrs. C. V. Burton entertained the graduates at dinner.

More than 300 Home pupils left by train Friday morning to spend their summer vacations with friends and relatives in various parts of the state, including Cincinnati, Springfield, Dayton, Columbus and Cleveland.

TILFORD WILL HEAD CHAUTAUQUA HERE; GUARANTORS ELECT

The Rev. William H. Tilford was re-elected president of the Xenia Chautauqua Association for 1929 at annual election of officers which featured a well-attended meeting of the eighty local chautauqua guarantors at City Hall Thursday night.

Other officers selected are: J. J. Stout, first vice-president; Miss Fannie K. Haynes, second vice-president; Mrs. W. L. Dean, secretary-treasurer.

An executive committee composed of Mrs. W. H. McGervey, G. W. Street, Miss Faye Cavanaugh Graham Bryson and Charles Bone, and a grounds committee made up of L. S. Barnes, J. H. Whitmer and Richard McClelland, were also appointed.

That the Redpath Chautauqua season for Xenia is "Just around the corner" was indicated with the arrival here Thursday of C. O. Callahan, Redpath advance representative. He has delivered chautauqua season tickets to the local officers and the chautauqua dates of July 6 to July 12, inclusive, stand out from local awnings, windows and automobiles.

Tickets were distributed to those present at the meeting and the remainder of the guarantors will receive their supply within a short time, it is announced.

The Redpath management has gone a step further this year than has been its custom, for in addition to the two headline plays usually offered, it is presenting Tamaki Miura, famous for her interpretation of the leading role in "Madame Butterfly."

Her appearance with the Chicago Civic Opera Co. and the San Carlo Opera Co. has added to the fame which already was hers when she came to America from her native Japan. Madame Miura is to be heard on chautauqua's third night, with her company of geisha girls.

Chautauqua opens with the Jugo-Slav Tamburica Orchestra, and Hilton Ira Jones with his popular scientific demonstrations.

The second day program includes Chief Strongheart and the Yakima Indian tribe, and the mystery comedy, "Three Wise Fools."

In addition to Madame Miura and her company, the third day's program includes Waldo Emerson Stephens, the brilliant young orator who toured the Redpath circuit just five years ago. This season he is to be heard in a discussion of "Facts and Fiction in Our Foreign Affairs."

On the fourth day Fern Casford, character artist, and associated instrumentalists will entertain, and Capt. "Dinnie" Upton, "big brother to a hundred thousand kids", will speak.

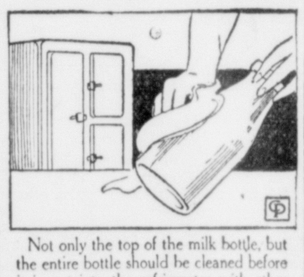

No Yong Park, Chinese author, orator and humorist, is slated for the fifth afternoon, with the comedy success, "Skidding", in the evening. This is the same play that has been running for a full year in New York City, and involves the domestic joys and sorrows of Judge Hardy and his family, in an Idaho town.

Chautauqua's closing day brings the Fairyland Frolic in the afternoon, especially for the children, with a program of magic, sand paintings, shadow pictures and surprising illusions by Henry and Company, in the evening.

SUITS BASED ON ACCIDENT SETTLED

JEFFERSON, O., June 7.—Damage suits against the New York Central Railroad, aggregating $125,950, filed as the result of an automobile accident in Conneaut, October 18, 1927, were settled out of court here today for $11,200. Two children were killed and four other members of the same family injured in the crash which occurred at the Chestnut St. crossing when the car in which they were riding was struck by a passenger train. Mrs. Elizabeth Norton, Conneaut, mother of the dead children, filed the action.

DALLAS MARSHALL

Dallas Marshall, Cedarville, a junior at Cedarville College, has accepted a position with Belden and Co., N. Detroit St., auto finance and insurance firm, in the capacity of auto insurance salesman throughout the Greene County territory. He will also sell auto club memberships.

Mr. Marshall, who is also college correspondent for The Gazette, for the last year has been in the auto insurance game for himself at Cedarville.

COUNTY DAIRY CLUB WILL MEET TUESDAY

The Greene County 4-H Dairy Club will meet in the assembly room of the Court House, Tuesday evening, at 8 o'clock to reorganize and formulate plans for the coming year.

Boys and girls between the ages of ten and twenty-one may join this club and may take either the dairy calf, dairy heifers or production project in either the Jersey, Guernsey or Holstein breeds.

This club not only offers opportunity to gain knowledge and experience with dairy cattle, but also aids in the four fold development of boys and girls. Seventeen members completed the project last year and the committee recently set this year's goal at forty. The county committee is composed of Lawrence Alexander and Fred Van Tress representing the Jersey breed, S. D. Andrew the Guernsey breed and Frank Wolf the Holstein breed. Mr. Wolf is also leader of the club. All boys and girls interested are urged to attend this meeting.

HOMES AND GARDENS WILL BE DISPLAYED HERE ON SATURDAY

Homes and gardens in Yellow Springs and many Xenia gardens will be open to the public Saturday afternoon for display in connection with the local observance of "Better Homes Week," postponed from April 21 to 27, because of weather conditions.

Miss Harriet Turner, Yellow Springs, is county chairman of local activities, assisted by Mrs. Ernest Bradford, Trebeins. The exhibit is promoted by "Better Homes in America," a national organization with headquarters at Washington, D. C., of which Dr. James Ford is national director and President Herbert Hoover is honorary head.

Purpose of the organization and the public display Saturday are to promote better homes and gardens and home ownership and to call attention to ways of improving the home at a minimum cost. Furniture and modern conveniences for the home will also be displayed.

Visitors are invited to inspect the homes and gardens that will be open to the public Saturday. Yellow Springs gardens will be open to the public between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon while Xenia gardens may be visited anytime Saturday afternoon.

Visitors are invited to make the following tour in Yellow Springs: Begin at the White Hall estate, inspect the home of Mrs. Foust, then Mrs. Humphrey's garden at Elm and Walnut Sts., and the nursery school for colored children.

On Pennell St., there will be open the garden of Oliver Henry and "The Little House of Five Chimneys," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Swinnerton, will be exhibited on Phillips St. Other gardens to be open are: at the home of David Hanchett on Davis St., D. A. McGruder's garden, the faculty lawn, and the gardens of Mrs. David Fittz, Mrs. Glossinger, Mrs. Lewis Gegner and President Arthur E. Morgan on Xenia Ave.

On N. College St., may be seen the garden of C. C. Stephenson and of Mrs. Zeller, and nearby the Day house and Miss Cape's home. The nursery school laboratory will be open to the public on Livermore St., and the home of Raymond Adams, the garden of Hayes Gaines, the Matthewson home and the Garrison homestead will be exhibited, both homes and gardens.

Gardens that may be visited in Xenia are those at the home of Mrs. C. A. Kelble, 124 W. Church St., Dr. R. R. McClellan, Springfield Pike, Dr. E. A. Kern, 685 S. Detroit St., Dr. B. R. McClellan, S. Detroit St., M. L. Wolf, N. King St., John Beacham, Hill St., Thomas Corrigan, 33 Elm St., and J. H. Kepler, N. Detroit St.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE PROMISED MESSENGER—Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.—Malachi 4:5, 6.

WHY DISCRIMINATION

The League of Industrial Democracy, whose avowed objective is "education for a new social order based on production for use and not for profit," is conducting a campaign to obtain 1,000 new members at $3 each a year.

The League has, as one of its directors, Norman Thomas, the most celebrated American academic socialist and a candidate for President in the last election. The organization is opposed to the capitalistic economic system and strongly favors a paternalistic government and government ownership of basic industries.

So far so good. But when the League, as it states, "reaches 100 colleges or so every year with speakers and literature on labor, imperialism and socialism," it is doing exactly what critics of the power industry objected to.

The League's invitation to prospective new members goes on to say that "professors and college presidents are welcoming us more heartily every year." A strange parallel this—when a few colleges welcomed speakers representing a basic industry owned by millions of American citizens, a federal investigation was instigated.

The reasoning of those who would destroy fundamental principles of our government, which for 150 years has encouraged private initiative and enterprise, is hard to understand. Are they to be considered better citizens than those who strive to uphold traditions upon which this nation was founded?

There is no reason why the League or any other organization of its kind, should not "reach" as many colleges as it can and get members willing to pay dues toward furthering its work. But certainly, legitimate business is entitled to the same right. Free discussion is the touch-stone of progress.

Muzzling or attempting to muzzle the utilities or any other industry or individual, is indeed a strange proceeding in this land of the free.

THIRTY-SIX WORDS TELL STORY

President Hoover said to Congress: "No discrimination against any foreign industry is involved in equalizing the difference in costs of producing at home and abroad, and thus taking from foreign producers the advantages they derive from paying lower wages to labor."

There is, as the President says, no discrimination against the foreign industry in providing for equalization of the difference in the production cost—it is simply a matter of protecting our own interests.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

A HOPEFUL VISITOR

Dr. Chang Po-ling, university president from China, has been looking us over. The last time he was here was 21 years ago. Freedom granted American children, he says, and the marriage and divorce situation, out of which there seems to be developing a new kind of home life, strike him as the most interesting developments in our country. He puts it pleasantly. Most of us do not see any new home life developing out of the mounting divorce statistics—or out of the new freedom for children.

PUSHING DOWN HORIZONS

This same Chinese visitor says the first time he was in America nobody asked questions about China. Nobody cared. Now he says he is so besieged with requests for speeches on China that he cannot fill the engagements. This is a good sign. Although we go slowly perhaps we are learning to think in terms of the world instead of in terms of the tenth word. Nothing could be more important than for our children to have the kind of education that will teach them to push down horizons and to be world-conscious. There may even be a day when man will be universe-conscious.

COLOR

Color came into the world a long time ago. But it remained for each passing month of modern times to work out new possibilitie. Clothes houses, and red barn have had the color treatment for centuries. Lately motors cars and still more lately typewriter began to glow like flowers. Now comes the lowly dustpan. You can have dustpans in all shades of the rainbow. Even the kitchen sink is lavender to say nothing of the bathroom floor. Doubtless up-and-coming dealers will be offering hard coal in colors to put into gaudy hand-painted furnaces.

INVESTIGATIONS OF OLD-AGE PENSION SYSTEMS URGED

By CLARENCE C. DILL
Senator from Washington

(Clarence C. Dill was born at Frederickstown, O., Sept. 21, 1884. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university. A newspaper and high school teacher for a year, he was admitted to the bar in 1910 and began practicing in Spokane, Wash. In 1912 he was chairman of the Democratic state convention. He was private secretary to Gov. Ernest Lister from 1913 to 1914 and was elected to congress in 1915, serving two terms. He was elected to the United States senate in 1923).

The purpose of my resolution for an investigation of old-age pension systems, recently introduced in the senate, is to obtain the facts upon which to consider sound, economical, constructive legislation, in order to provide some form of security for our aged and worthy poor in the evening of their lives. The sound common sense and fairness of the American people will demand the enactment of modern system of old-age pensions as soon as the actual facts are made public.

Old-age pensions laws are bound to be adopted throughout the United States in the next 10 years, because they are just; and the main question to be settled will be whether they should be state or federal enactments, or a combination of both.

The smug and complacent man of means sometimes fails to appreciate that the wage earner is apt to be thrown out on the industrial scrap heap after he reaches his fiftieth birthday, whereas in business and in the professions or in politics men often do their best work between 50 and 60, where maturity of judgment and ripened experience are a distinct advantage.

A constructive modern social policy must be worked out after a careful study of all the facts strictly on the basis of merit for the best interests of the American people.

RIVALS

Of all the torments, all the cares,
With which our lives are cursed;
Of all the plagues a lover bears,
Sure rivals are the worst!
By partners in each other kind
Afflictions easier grow;
In love alone we hate to find
Companions of our woe.

Sylvia, for all the pangs you see
Are laboring in my breast,
I beg not you would favor me.
Would you but slight the rest!
How great soe'er your rigors are,
With them alone I'll cope;
I can endure my own despair,
But not another's hope.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Nowhere in the world is there so much face cream bought and used as in this country—and nowhere is there any more confusion about the meaning of it. To many women all cream is just "cold cream." Some kinds they know are for cleansing, others for stimulating and bleaching and others for nourishing. But still all remain cold cream, and the distinctions among them to many rather hazy.

These are the women who often ask for one cream which will do the work of several, a kind of three-in-one. This seems to me like asking a great deal of the toilet cream manufacturer. Because it is not easy to make a panacea for all complexion ills.

Some creams and lotions do combine properties which make them suitable for several uses. But the most effective creams are specialized just as foods are.

When you go out to do your shopping you do not demand of the grocer a food—one food—that will have in it every known food element. Do you? Even supposing that you had no appetite, would you expect one food to satisfy your needs under all conditions and at all times? And not only for you but for any number of other people, whatever their habits and states of health?

Milk is said to be a perfect food because good milk combines in one easily digested form all the food elements. And for the very young child milk is enough as a food. But the older person prefers not to go on a continuous milk diet unless illness makes it neiessary. This one food is hardly enough to satisfy the complex needs of the average adult system.

Demanding of the beauty specialist one cream for everyone for every purpose for all the time, is a little like asking for a treatment more perfect than milk is as a food for the body.

There is one cream, the pasteurized face cream, made with pasteurized milk, and containing stimulating ingredients, which comes nearer to combining all the necessary properties for cleansing, stimulating and nourishing the skin than any other one cream. The milk which it contains makes it an ideal cleansing and soothing agent (good pure milk has always been recognized as a refreshing bath for the skin) and a moderate nourisher as well, while the stimulating ingredients give it mild tonic properties. This cream is enough for the needs of the young skin, or the mature skin that has not aged perceptibly, in which the circulation is good.

But the older skin and the skin that is not normal needs still other treatment. Even if it were chemically possible to combine in one preparation the ingredients which cleanse, stimulate, tone and nourish in sufficient strength to accomplish perfectly each of these functions, one might defeat the purpose of another. For example, a cleansing cream should be light in texture that its oils may properly cleanse the skin and yet be easily removed. The necessarily rich texture of a nourishing cream makes it less suitable for cleansing. Then too, the richer, rarer oils and other ingredients which go into stimulating and nourishing creams make them cost more. A cleansing cream is the cream you use in large quantities and does not need to be so expensive as it is removed immediately. To use a cream for cleansing which is a perfect nourisher would be an unnecessray extravagance, since it would not be the best type of cleansing cream, and, on account of its ingredients, is necessarily a more expensive cream.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

(The first of a series of three articles on law enforcement).

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, June 5.—Senator Harry B. Hawes, of Missouri, once was president of the St. Louis police board. Senator Carl Hayden, of Arizona, formerly was sheriff of Maricopa county.

About 90 per cent of America's legislators can theorize learnedly, out of state and federal statute books, concerning law enforcement—while law breakers run rampant throughout the land. When it comes to a few definite suggestions concerning actual enforcement, Senators Hawes and Hayden have a monopoly on all the practical experiece at the capitol.

To Senators Hawes and Hayden, alone among the 531 members of both houses of congress, this country's widely-advertised crime wave means something besides a problem for the courts to solve.

* * *

Laws are sacred to congress' lawyer-members. How anybody can be so irreverent as to break them is more than they can imagine.

What do they know about law-breaking psychology!

Their concept of a criminal is a thoroughly bad character—not a redeeming quality in his whole makeup—who fortunately has been caught—and has got to be tried—and the question is how to convict him and keep him locked up—for life, if possible.

They discuss the crime issue in terms of legal tomes.

Senators Hawes and Hayden visualize criminals as loose—Senator Hawes thinks of them as snooping down dark alleys or jimmying basement windows—Senator Hayden as abroad on the prairie, maybe rustling cattle—anyway, as determined not to be caught if they can help it—more or less dangerous—folk who must be dealt with physically.

Also Senators Hawes and Hayden are aware that a criminal may be, personally, a very likable fellow—not all bad, by any means.

In short, Senators Hawes and Hayden are charitable.

* * *

Frankly, the trouble with President Hoover's anti-crime commission is that nearly its whole personnel is ignorant of the law-breaking mentality—that is, small-scale law breakers. As a celebrated corporation lawyer, ex-Attorney General George W. Wickersham doubtless understands the big ones—in the multimillionaire class.

However, is it likely that Mr. Wickersham ever has batted around extensively in the company of racketeers?—studying their ways.

Or that Dean Roscoe Pound of Harvard Law school has done so?

Or that President Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe College of Women numbers any desperate outlaws among her acquaintances?

Frank J. Loesch, of Mr. Hoover's anti-crime organization, may be an exception. As vice president of Chicago's crime commission, perhaps he really is on speaking relations with some crooks.

Indeed, we know for a fact that Mr. Loesch hunted up Scarface Al Capone and appealed to Al's better nature—to "be good."

(Ordiarily Senator Hawes is not given to levity—a serious statesman; dignified and unsmiling. Yet he laughed right out loud when I mentioned this Loesch-Capone incident to him.)

Senators Hawes and Hayden look their respective former roles as if they had been made for them, according to specifications.

Senator Hawes could sit, any time, for the ideal portrait of a high police official in a big city. He is a stocky, strongly-built man, with a determined face and a quiet manner, but an unmistakable hint back of it that it would be bad business to trifle with him.

Senator Hayden is an equally convincing sketch of a western sheriff. Tall, lean, rangy, sunburned, affable, informal—shifting an unlighted cigar from corner to corner of his mouth, as he chats amiably—all he needs is a holster on either hip to complete the picture almost to the point of caricature.

* * *

Senator Hawes—from wet St. Louis.

Senator Hayden—from dry Arizona.

Senator Hawes knows all there is to be known about urban crime and urban criminals—the law enforcement proposition as it exists in our great, congested centers of population.

Senator Hayden is the rural enforcement official—familiar with all the difficulties of keeping order in a vast, thinly-settled district.

There are only two of them but they cover a broad range of territory.

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Beef Pot Roast
Pickles Olives
Whole Wheat and White Bread
Butter
Fruit Lemonade

These are the ingredients from which the picnic lunch is to be made, and also these foods will make the bais of a very nice mid-night "snack" when eaten by the young folks who have been out for an evening's fun, especially if they have been out of doors a good deal. These same young people will soon be home from school, and, if they are away from home during the year, mother's cooking will taste very good to them. Cold ham — home cooked—is, of course, always nice to slice and eat with bread and butter in sandwich style at the same midnight luncheon.

Today's Recipes

Beef Pot Roast—Choose a piece of meat that will slice well. Wipe it clean and dry, then brown in beef suet or bacon fat, add a bay leaf or two, a small onion, stick a few whole cloves into meat, season with salt and pepper and cover with hot water. Let simmer gently until it is very tender. Let cool and it may be sliced and made into delicious sandwiches or ground with pimentoes and onion, or pimento alone and used for sandwiches

Mothproof Bag

Take two newspapers of eight thicknesses and stitch three sides together to make a bag. Add the garments, sew up the open side and hang up in the closet. Moths do not like printer's ink.

Some housekeepers attach the window shades to the roller with one-inch-wide adhesive tape, and they find it much easier and more pleasant than using the usual hammer and tacks.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Protein Requirements.

"Would one-half pound of English walnuts a day be too much or too little protein for me? I cannot eat meat, eggs or cheese by doctor's orders as autointoxication sets in each time. I get tired of milk each day and depend on the walnuts. I do all my housework. Is the amount of protein I get enough for me? I am 5 ft. 1 inch tall, 31 years old. I reduced by following your instructions from 191 to 149. MRS. H."

One-half ounce of walnuts is 100 calories, of which but 11 are protein, 82 fat and 7 carbohydrates. If you took 8 ounces, or one-half pound, you would have a total of 1,600 calories; 176 of which are protein, 1,312 fat and 112 carbohydrates You see from this, Mrs. H., that you would be getting altogether too much fat, so you would very soon be putting on your excess weight again. Also, such a consumption of nuts would unbalance your diet altogether.

All nuts are practically the same in their content of fat and protein, except chestnuts, which are mostly carbohydrate. I wouldn't advise you to take nearly so many. If you get tired of milk, ask your doctor if you can't have some simple cottage cheese; that is often allowed where other cheeses are not. In 100 calories of this cheese, (3 ounces), there are 76 protein calories.

One needs from 250 to 350 calories of protein daily, depending upon the size of the framework, not upon the physical activities. (Protein is the principle of food which has to do with growth of new tissue and repair of old.)

You are still considerably overweight, Mrs. H. Hasn't your overweight had considerable to do with your condition for which you are now on a diet?

We have an article on Balanced Diet which you may have. Those who need instructions on reducing may have our pamphlet on the subject by following column rules.

Mrs. L.—It seems to me you need a good physical check-up, for it may be possible your mental disorder may be caused from some toxemia (poison in the blood) from absorption of poisons and putrefaction in the intestines or from some other point of infection in the body.

You have been sent our article on Contipation. Follow that and get your bowels in good condition. Get eight hours of sleep each night, with a good circulation of fresh air, and then stay out of doors all day long, if you can.

Say to yourself emphatically that you are going to snap out of it! If you could have the help of a skillful psychiatrist, you would get along more rapidly, but you can do a good deal by yourself. I know you want to do this, or you wouldn't be writing to me. And wanting to do a thing strongly enough, will give you the will power to get started.

N.—Spots that itch intolerably, without any apparent cause, and are not relieved by simply ointment and lotions containing a few drops of carbolic acid to the ounce, may be relieved by treatment with the X-ray, so I have seen reported in my medical literature. Deep pressure on the spot instead of scratching may relieve more.

Editor's Note: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose or give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and 2 cents in coin for each article, to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, 10 cents in coin, with fully self-addressed, stamped envelop, must be enclosed. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"My Dear Virginia Lee: You mentioned in your column the other day that the general cry of your readers seemed to be, 'What can I do to be popular?' I am a used-to-be unpopular girl who learned the secret of popularity. Listen!

"If you ever studied salesmanship, you heard about the 'you attitude.' The clever salesman goes to his prospective customer and tells him how the product he has to sell will help his business or interests. He doesn't say, 'This is a wonderful cash register. It's just the thing I need in my business'. No, he appeals to the self-interests of the customer. He talks about the customer's business, not his own.

"A girl seeking popularity is trying to sell her personality. She can't do it by making clever remarks to a man, or telling him what she thinks about things, or by smiling bewitchingly, or even by being beautiful. She must appeal to his self-interest. She must show an interest in the things he says to her, encourage him to talk about himself, and talk to him about the things he is interested in. Example: Bill says to you, 'I feel tired tonight.' You might say, 'So do I. I ironed all morning and this afternoon I helped mother can fruit.' If you did Bill would probably be bored. The reply he expected was 'What have you been doing?' That gives him a chance to tell you something he wanted to tell you.

"Every man has his talents and strong points. If you appreciate that fact, popularity is easy. If the man you are with is interested in biology and knows a great deal about it, encourage him to talk about it. That gives him a chance to shine. Be an intelligent listener. If you expect to hold his interest long, you must learn something about biology so that you can show an understanding of what he is saying. If baseball is his hobby, start him talking about it by remarking, 'I noticed in the paper that Babe Ruth knocked another home run yesterday.' Get the idea?

"Above all, never make a man feel inferior. Always laugh at his jokes, but never ridicule his opinion on serious matters. Don't express your ideas too forcibly! be good natured about it. If you disagree with something he says, tell him so, but don't treat his idea as if it wasn't worth considering.

"Subtle flattery is the keynote of popularity. Make a man feel he is wonderful and he will respond by making you feel that you are wonderful. Make him feel that you are trying to be the star performer and he'll start looking for a girl who will say, 'How do you DO that, John?'

"Will you print this letter, Virginia? I realize that it is rather long, but I think it is what your readers are looking for. CLEOPATRA."

You see I am printing it, Cleopatra, and thank you. It is what I have been trying to say for some time and better than I could say it. I might add that the same rule works with all people, male or female, old or young, and that a genuine interest in people and their hobbies goes further than a feigned one.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl of 18 and have been keeping company with a fellow 19 for at least three years, but we are not engaged yet, but thinking about it. But we are accused of things that aren't so. Please give us your best advice, as I am very anxious to know what to do. "POLLY E."

Go your own way and pay no attention to what people say, Polly E. They must have something to talk about. You and the boy friend happen to be the victims this time, that is all.

THE ONE-MINUTE PULPIT

O love the Lord, all ye his saints: for the Lord preserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer.

Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord.—Psalm xxxi, 23, 24.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

"AN ATTACK BY THE ENEMY"

"That is the way wife and I joked about scary old Black Crow, but woe is me! How I wish we had heeded his warning! If we had all would have been well."

White Heron shook his head, and once again Peter saw that the poor bird trembled.

'We scarcely looked up, though; we were too much interested in digging out the shrimp.

"And steadily down the silent stream paddled our two-legged enemy in his little boat."

"Neighbor Herons, Neighbor Herons, fly for your lives! The two-legged Hunter is upon you."

"Black Crow's voice was loud and shrill, and now at last we knew he was telling the truth. Our enemy had found us out.

"Too late. Too late! White Heron's wail was pitiful to hear, and he shook with fear as he relived that terrible day.

"It was not danger alone that threatened us. Death itself, with swift wings, was flying upon our trail. We turned to escape. Right below us was the boat, but even yet there might be time to hide ourselves far off in the swamps where the Hunter could not follow.

"But even as we made the first curve on the course that led to safety we thought of the children. What good would our lives be to us if anything should happen to them! We could never be happy if we had to think all the rest of our days that we had flown away and left our helpless babies to their fate. Perhaps we could not save them, but at least we would not leave them all alone.

"We turned about and set out for the nests. We could hear the little ones crying to us and we hurried as fast as we could, but when we sighted our home tree we saw that all the other parents in the rookery were there before us.

"Some of the Herons had heeded the warning in time and had gotten their babies off the nest and to a place of safety. Others were protecting their children in the only way they knew how by spreading their wings before them.

"Wife flew screeching toward our little ones, but before she could reach the nest 'Bang!' went the stick-that-kills and my beautiful sweetheart went crashing to the earth.

"I tried to go to her, but my wings wouldn't work. I just dropped down on the ground and flopped around there so frightened that I could neither run nor fly. It so happened that I had fallen behind a great clump of swamp grass, and so I was hidden from the cruel Hunter although I could see all that was going on in the home tree."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE PROMISED MESSENGER—Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.—Malachi 4:5, 6.

WHY DISCRIMINATION

The League of Industrial Democracy, whose avowed objective is "education for a new social order based on production for use and not for profit," is conducting a campaign to obtain 1,000 new members at $3 each a year.

The League has, as one of its directors, Norman Thomas, the most celebrated American academic socialist and a candidate for President in the last election. The organization is opposed to the capitalistic economic system and strongly favors a paternalistic government and government ownership of basic industries.

So far so good. But when the League, as it states, "reaches 100 colleges or so every year with speakers and literature on labor, imperialism and socialism," it is doing exactly what critics of the power industry objected to.

The League's invitation to prospective new members goes on to say that "professors and college presidents are welcoming us more heartily every year." A strange parallel this—when a few colleges welcomed speakers representing a basic industry owned by millions of American citizens, a federal investigation was instigated.

The reasoning of those who would destroy fundamental principles of our government, which for 150 years has encouraged private initiative and enterprise, is hard to understand. Are they to be considered better citizens than those who strive to uphold traditions upon which this nation was founded?

There is no reason why the League or any other organization of its kind, should not "reach" as many colleges as it can and get members willing to pay dues toward furthering its work. But certainly, legitimate business is entitled to the same right. Free discussion is the touch-stone of progress.

Muzzling or attempting to muzzle the utilities or any other industry or individual, is indeed a strange proceeding in this land of the free.

THIRTY-SIX WORDS TELL STORY

President Hoover said to Congress: "No discrimination against any foreign industry is involved in equalizing the difference in costs of producing at home and abroad, and thus taking from foreign producers the advantages they derive from paying lower wages to labor."

There is, as the President says, no discrimination against the foreign industry in providing for equalization of the difference in the production cost—it is simply a matter of protecting our own interests.

The Way of the World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

A HOPEFUL VISITOR

Dr. Chang Po-ling, university president from China, has been looking us over. The last time he was here was 21 years ago. Freedom granted American children, he says, and the marriage and divorce situation, out of which there seems to be developing a new kind of home life, strike him as the most interesting developments in our country. He puts it pleasantly. Most of us do not see any new home life developing out of the mounting divorce statistics—or out of the new freedom for children.

PUSHING DOWN HORIZONS

This same Chinese visitor says the first time he was in America nobody asked questions about China. Nobody cared. Now he says he is so besieged with requests for speeches on China that he cannot fill the engagements. This is a good sign. Although we go slowly perhaps we are learning to think in terms of the world instead of in terms of the tenth word. Nothing could be more important than for our children to have the kind of education that will teach them to push down horizons and to be world-conscious. There may even be a day when man will be universe-conscious.

COLOR

Color came into the world a long time ago. But it remained for each passing month of modern times to work out new possibilitie. Clothes houses, and red barn have had the color treatment for centuries. Lately motors cars and still more lately typewriter began to glow like flowers. Now comes the lowly dustpan. You can have dustpans in all shades of the rainbow. Even the kitchen sink is lavender to say nothing of the bathroom floor. Doubtless up-and-coming dealers will be offering hard coal in colors to put into gaudy hand-painted furnaces.

INVESTIGATIONS OF OLD-AGE PENSION SYSTEMS URGED

By CLARENCE C. DILL
Senator from Washington

(Clarence C. Dill was born at Frederickstown, O., Sept. 21, 1884. He is a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan university. A newspaper and high school teacher for a year, he was admitted to the bar in 1910 and began practicing in Spokane, Wash. In 1912 he was chairman of the Democratic state convention. He was private secretary to Gov. Ernest Lister from 1913 to 1914 and was elected to congress in 1915, serving two terms. He was elected to the United States senate in 1923).

The purpose of my resolution for an investigation of old-age pension systems, recently introduced in the senate, is to obtain the facts upon which to consider sound, economical, constructive legislation, in order to provide some form of security for our aged and worthy poor in the evening of their lives. The sound common sense and fairness of the American people will demand the enactment of modern system of old-age pensions as soon as the actual facts are made public.

Old-age pensions laws are bound to be adopted throughout the United States in the next 10 years, because they are just; and the main question to be settled will be whether they should be state or federal enactments, or a combination of both.

The smug and complacent man of means sometimes fails to appreciate that the wage earner is apt to be thrown out on the industrial scrap heap after he reaches his fiftieth birthday, whereas in business and in the professions or in politics men often do their best work between 50 and 60, where maturity of judgment and ripened experience are a distinct advantage.

A constructive modern social policy must be worked out after a careful study of all the facts strictly on the basis of merit for the best interests of the American people.

RIVALS

Of all the torments, all the cares,
With which our lives are cursed;
Of all the plagues a lover bears,
Sure rivals are the worst!
By partners in each other kind
Afflictions easier grow;
In love alone we hate to find
Companions of our woe.

Sylvia, for all the pangs you see
Are laboring in my breast,
I beg not you would favor me.
Would you but slight the rest!
How great soe'er your rigors are,
With them alone I'll cope;
I can endure my own despair,
But not another's hope.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Nowhere in the world is there so much face cream bought and used as in this country—and nowhere is there any more confusion about the meaning of it. To many women all cream is just "cold cream." Some kinds they know are for cleansing, others for stimulating and bleaching and others for nourishing. But still all remain cold cream, and the distinctions among them to many rather hazy.

These are the women who often ask for one cream which will do the work of several, a kind of three-in-one. This seems to me like asking a great deal of the toilet cream manufacturer. Because it is not easy to make a panacea for all complexion ills.

Some creams and lotions do combine properties which make them suitable for several uses. But the most effective creams are specialized just as foods are.

When you go out to do your shopping you do not demand of the grocer a food—one food—that will have in it every known food element. Do you? Even supposing that you had no appetite, would you expect one food to satisfy your needs under all conditions and at all times? And not only for you but for any number of other people, whatever their habits and states of health?

Milk is said to be a perfect food because good milk combines in one easily digested form all the food elements. And for the very young child milk is enough as a food. But the older person prefers not to go on a continuous milk diet unless illness makes it neiessary. This one food is hardly enough to satisfy the complex needs of the average adult system.

Demanding of the beauty specialist one cream for everyone for every purpose for all the time, is a little like asking for a treatment more perfect than milk is as a food for the body.

There is one cream, the pasteurized face cream, made with pasteurized milk, and containing stimulating ingredients, which comes nearer to combining all the necessary properties for cleansing, stimulating and nourishing the skin than any other one cream. The milk which it contains makes it an ideal cleansing and soothing agent (good pure milk has always been recognized as a refreshing bath for the skin) and a moderate nourisher as well, while the stimulating ingredients give it mild tonic properties. This cream is enough for the needs of the young skin, or the mature skin that has not aged perceptibly, in which the circulation is good.

But the older skin and the skin that is not normal needs still other treatment. Even if it were chemically possible to combine in one preparation the ingredients which cleanse, stimulate, tone and nourish in sufficient strength to accomplish perfectly each of these functions, one might defeat the purpose of another. For example, a cleansing cream should be light in texture that its oils may properly cleanse the skin and yet be easily removed. The necessarily rich texture of a nourishing cream makes it less suitable for cleansing. Then too, the richer, rarer oils and other ingredients which go into stimulating and nourishing creams make them cost more. A cleansing cream is the cream you use in large quantities and does not need to be so expensive as it is removed immediately. To use a cream for cleansing which is a perfect nourisher would be an unnecessray extravagance, since it would not be the best type of cleansing cream, and, on account of its ingredients, is necessarily a more expensive cream.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

(The first of a series of three articles on law enforcement).

Or that President Ada L. Comstock of Radcliffe College of Women numbers any desperate outlaws among her acquaintances?

Frank J. Loesch, of Mr. Hoover's anti-crime organization, may be an exception. As vice president of Chicago's crime commission, perhaps he really is on speaking relations with some crooks.

Indeed, we know for a fact that Mr. Loesch hunted up Scarface Al Capone and appealed to Al's better nature—to "be good."

(Ordiarily Senator Hawes is not given to levity—a serious statesman; dignified and unsmiling. Yet he laughed right out loud when I mentioned this Loesch-Capone incident to him.)

Senators Hawes and Hayden look their respective former roles as if they had been made for them, according to specifications.

Senator Hawes could sit, any time, for the ideal portrait of a high police official in a big city. He is a stocky, strongly-built man, with a determined face and a quiet manner, but an unmistakable hint back of it that it would be bad business to trifle with him.

Senator Hayden is an equally convincing sketch of a western sheriff. Tall, lean, rangy, sunburned, affable, informal—shifting an unlighted cigar from corner to corner of his mouth, as he chats amiably—all he needs is a holster on either hip to complete the picture almost to the point of caricature.

* * *

Senator Hawes—from wet St. Louis.

Senator Hayden—from dry Arizona.

Senator Hawes knows all there is to be known about urban crime and urban criminals—the law enforcement proposition as it exists in our great, congested centers of population.

Senator Hayden is the rural enforcement official—familiar with all the difficulties of keeping order in a vast, thinly-settled district.

There are only two of them but they cover a broad range of territory.

Household Hints

BY MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Beef Pot Roast
Pickles Olives
Whole Wheat and White Bread
Butter
Fruit Lemonade

These are the ingredients from which the picnic lunch is to be made, and also these foods will make the bais of a very nice mid-night "snack" when eaten by the young folks who have been out for an evening's fun, especially if they have been out of doors a good deal. These same young people will soon be home from school, and, if they are away from home during the year, mother's cooking will taste very good to them. Cold ham — home cooked—is, of course, always nice to slice and eat with bread and butter in sandwich style at the same midnight luncheon.

Today's Recipes

Beef Pot Roast—Choose a piece of meat that will slice well. Wipe it clean and dry, then brown in beef suet or bacon fat, add a bay leaf or two, a small onion, stick a few whole cloves into meat, season with salt and pepper and cover with hot water. Let simmer gently until it is very tender. Let cool and it may be sliced and made into delicious sandwiches or ground with pimentoes and onion, or pimento alone and used for sandwiches

Mothproof Bag

Take two newspapers of eight thicknesses and stitch three sides together to make a bag. Add the garments, sew up the open side and hang up in the closet. Moths do not like printer's ink.

Some housekeepers attach the window shades to the roller with one-inch-wide adhesive tape, and they find it much easier and more pleasant than using the usual hammer and tacks.

Diet and Health

BY LULU HUNT PETERS, M.D. AUTHOR OF "DIET AND HEALTH" AND "DIET FOR CHILDREN"

Protein Requirements.

"Would one-half pound of English walnuts a day be too much or too little protein for me? I cannot eat meat, eggs or cheese by doctor's orders as autointoxication sets in each time. I get tired of milk each day and depend on the walnuts. I do all my housework. Is the amount of protein I get enough for me? I am 5 ft. 1 inch tall, 31 years old. I reduced by following your instructions from 191 to 149. MRS. H."

One-half ounce of walnuts is 100 calories, of which but 11 are protein, 82 fat and 7 carbohydrates. If you took 8 ounces, or one-half pound, you would have a total of 1,600 calories; 176 of which are protein, 1,312 fat and 112 carbohydrates You see from this, Mrs. H., that you would be getting altogether too much fat, so you would very soon be putting on your excess weight again. Also, such a consumption of nuts would unbalance your diet altogether.

All nuts are practically the same in their content of fat and protein, except chestnuts, which are mostly carbohydrate. I wouldn't advise you to take nearly so many. If you get tired of milk, ask your doctor if you can't have some simple cottage cheese; that is often allowed where other cheeses are not. In 100 calories of this cheese, (3 ounces), there are 76 protein calories.

One needs from 250 to 350 calories of protein daily, depending upon the size of the framework, not upon the physical activities. (Protein is the principle of food which has to do with growth of new tissue and repair of old.)

You are still considerably overweight, Mrs. H. Hasn't your overweight had considerable to do with your condition for which you are now on a diet?

We have an article on Balanced Diet which you may have. Those who need instructions on reducing may have our pamphlet on the subject by following column rules.

Mrs. L.—It seems to me you need a good physical check-up, for it may be possible your mental disorder may be caused from some toxemia (poison in the blood) from absorption of poisons and putrefaction in the intestines or from some other point of infection in the body.

You have been sent our article on Contipation. Follow that and get your bowels in good condition. Get eight hours of sleep each night, with a good circulation of fresh air, and then stay out of doors all day long, if you can.

Say to yourself emphatically that you are going to snap out of it! If you could have the help of a skillful psychiatrist, you would get along more rapidly, but you can do a good deal by yourself. I know you want to do this, or you wouldn't be writing to me. And wanting to do a thing strongly enough, will give you the will power to get started.

N.—Spots that itch intolerably, without any apparent cause, and are not relieved by simply ointment and lotions containing a few drops of carbolic acid to the ounce, may be relieved by treatment with the X-ray, so I have seen reported in my medical literature. Deep pressure on the spot instead of scratching may relieve more.

For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, 10 cents in coin, with fully self-addressed, stamped envelop, must be enclosed. Address Dr. Peters, in care of this paper.

Living and Loving

BY MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"My Dear Virginia Lee: You mentioned in your column the other day that the general cry of your readers seemed to be, 'What can I do to be popular?' I am a used-to-be unpopular girl who learned the secret of popularity. Listen!

"If you ever studied salesmanship, you heard about the 'you attitude.' The clever salesman goes to his prospective customer and tells him now the product he has to sell will help his business or interests. He doesn't say, 'This is a wonderful cash register. It's just the thing I need in my business'. No, he appeals to the self-interests of the customer. He talks about the customer's business, not his own.

"A girl seeking popularity is trying to sell her personality. She can't do it by making clever remarks to a man, or telling him what she thinks about things, or by smiling bewitchingly, or even by being beautiful. She must appeal to his self-interest. She must show an interest in the things he says to her, encourage him to talk about himself, and talk to him about the things he is interested in. Example: Bill says to you, 'I feel tired tonight.' You might say, 'So do I. I ironed all morning and this afternoon I helped mother can fruit.' If you did Bill would probably be bored. The reply he expected was 'What have you been doing?' That gives him a chance to tell you something he wanted to tell you.

"Every man has his talents and strong points. If you appreciate that fact, popularity is easy. If the man you are with is interested in biology and knows a great deal about it, encourage him to talk about it. That gives him a chance to shine. Be an intelligent listener. If you expect to hold his interest long, you must learn something about biology so that you can show an understanding of what he is saying. If baseball is his hobby, start him talking about it by remarking, 'I noticed in the paper that Babe Ruth knocked another home run yesterday.' Get the idea?

"Above all, never make a man feel inferior. Always laugh at his jokes, but never ridicule his opinion on serious matters. Don't express your ideas too forcibly! be good natured about it. If you disagree with something he says, tell him so, but don't treat his idea as if it wasn't worth considering.

"Subtle flattery is the keynote of popularity. Make a man feel he is wonderful and he will respond by making you feel that you are wonderful. Make him feel that you are trying to be the star performer and he'll start looking for a girl who will say, 'How do you DO that, John?'

"Will you print this letter, Virginia? I realize that it is rather long, but I think it is what your readers are looking for. CLEOPATRA."

You see I am printing it, Cleopatra, and thank you. It is what I have been trying to say for some time and better than I could say it. I might add that the same rule works with all people, male or female, old or young, and that a genuine interest in people and their hobbies goes further than a feigned one.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a girl of 18 and have been keeping company with a fellow 19 for at least three years, but we are not engaged yet, but thinking about it. But we are accused of things that aren't so. Please give us your best advice, as I am very anxious to know what to do.

"POLLY E."

Go your own way and pay no attention to what people say, Polly E. They must have something to talk about. You and the boy friend happen to be the victims this time, that is all.

THE ONE-MINUTE PULPIT

O love the Lord, all ye his saints: for the Lord preserveth the faithful, and plentifully rewardeth the proud doer.

Be of good courage, and he shall strengthen your heart, all ye that hope in the Lord.—Psalm xxxi, 23, 24.

Peter's Adventures

BY MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

"AN ATTACK BY THE ENEMY"

"That is the way wife and I joked about scary old Black Crow, but woe is me! How I wish we had heeded his warning! If we had all would have been well."

'We scarcely looked up, though; we were too much interested in digging out the shrimp.

"And steadily down the silent stream paddled our two-legged enemy in his little boat."

"Neighbor Herons, Neighbor Herons, fly for your lives! The two-legged Hunter is upon you."

"Black Crow's voice was loud and shrill, and now at last we knew he was telling the truth. Our enemy had found us out.

"Too late. Too late! White Heron's wail was pitiful to hear, and he shook with fear as he relived that terrible day.

"It was not danger alone that threatened us. Death itself, with swift wings, was flying upon our trail. We turned to escape. Right below us was the boat, but even yet there might be time to hide ourselves far off in the swamp where the Hunter could not follow.

"But even as we made the first curve on the course that led to safety we thought of the children. What good would our lives be to us if anything should happen to them! We could never be happy if we had to think all the rest of our days that we had flown away and left our helpless babies to their fate. Perhaps we could not save them, but at least we would not leave them all alone.

"We turned about and set out for the nests. We could hear the little ones crying to us and we hurried as fast as we could, but when we sighted our home tree we saw that all the other parents in the rookery were there before us.

"Some of the Herons had heeded the warning in time and had gotten their babies off the nest and to a place of safety. Others were protecting their children in the only way they knew how by spreading their wings before them.

"Wife flew screeching toward our little ones, but before she could reach the nest 'Bang!' went the stick-that-kills and my beautiful sweetheart went crashing to the earth.

"I tried to go to her, but my wings wouldn't work. I just dropped down on the ground and flopped around there so frightened that I could neither run nor fly. It so happened that I had fallen behind a great clump of swamp grass, and so I was hidden from the cruel Hunter although I could see all that was going on in the home tree."

DOWNTOWNERS DEFEAT LANGS; TIE HARNESS FOR FIRST PLACE

Recording its fourth straight victory, The Downtown Country Club softball team slipped back into a tie with the Harness Cigars for first place in the National League by trimming the Lang Chevrolet Co. nine, 9 to 3 Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Bunching their thirteen hits to good advantage the Downtowners scored twice in each of the first, third and sixth innings and added three more markers for good measure in the eighth. Langs tallied one run in each of the second, fourth and eighth rounds.

R. Finlay and Huston led the assault on Doak, Lang's pitcher, each making three hits. Finlay knocked a home run with one on base in the sixth. Leahey, Lang third baseman, accounted for three of his team's eight hits.

Leroy Doak pitched for Langs with Randall behind the plate. Frame and McCurran formed the battery for the D. T. C. Club.

Coates Barber Shop and the Rotary Club will play off a postponed American League game Friday night. Lineups:

WILBERFORCE WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR LARGE ENDOWMENT

Tuesday, June 11 will be a red letter day at Wilberforce University.

On that day the university's million dollar endowment drive will be launched with special exercises.

Charles F. Jones, private secretary of Governor Myers Y. Cooper, will be the speaker at the afternoon meeting. Mr. Jones will come as a personal representative of the governor. He is nationally known as secretary of of the late Senator F. B. Willis.

In the evening Robert S. Abbott, editor of the Chicago Defender, leading colored weekly, will deliver the chief address. Mr. Abbott is well known in the newspaper field and is in demand for addresses all over the country.

His address will set the stage for an appeal for the endowment goal.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Wilberforce University Quartet, which has enjoyed a successful year of touring the East and Middle West. There will also be a trained chorus of twenty-five voices.

The public is being invited to attend both meetings.

SPORT SHOTS

The Cleveland Indians have played but one game in Boston on Sunday. And they lost it.

* * *

Clarence DeMar, six-time Boston marathon winner, will run in Los Angeles marathon June 15.

* * *

Wyllis Terry of Yale made the longest run to touchdown in football history when he galloped 115 yards in 1884.

* * *

Ken Strong, New York University grid star, hopes to play pro baseball in New England. He lives in West Haven, Conn.

* * *

Jim Bottomley, most valuable National league player last season, went direct from high school diamond to the St. Louis Cardinals.

* * *

* * *

Yale beat Princeton, fifteen times in seventeen years, at football, from 1900 to 1916, losing only in 1903 and 1911.

BEACHES RUINED

ASHTABULA, O., June 7.—Heavy storms of the past spring and the high water level of Lake Erie have combined to seriously affect beaches along the Ashtabula County shore line. The beach line, on the whole, has been set bacq from two to trhee feet by the high water and this has resulted in inundating the beach in some localities.

BRAVES SHOW FANS THEY MEAN IT

Getting off to a flying start, smacking Brooklyn's touted pitchers (including mighty Dazzy Vance) with great gusto, and leading the National league for first few days of season, Boston's rejuvenated Braves have demonstrated they meant it when they said their "door mat" days were over. Above are Jumping Joe Dugan, left, and Pat Collins, former Yankees trying for comebacks with the Braves. Inset is Judge Emil Fuchs, Braves president-manager.

OLD TIMERS TODAY

In Which George Stovall Writes About Nap Lajoie, Great Hitter.

By GEORGE STOVALL
Former Big League Star First Baseman and Former Manager of Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Kansas City Federals. Written Expressly for Central Press and The Gazette

A sun-bronzed, willowy man goes about Cleveland these days meeting baseball fans whose god he once was. He is Napoleon Lajoie, tire salesman, to some folks. But to the Forest City's host of baseball fans he is Larry Lajoie, brilliant diamondeer of another day.

Now that his playing days are over, Lajoie is playing the game of business just as hard as he did the national pastime. Lajoie should find business good in the town whose baseball fortunes he once guided as manager of the Cleveland Naps (now Indians) and where he played so brilliantly.

One of baseball's most graceful and natural players, and one of the most feared batters of all time passed out of the game when Lajoie, a star second baseman and former teammate of mine on the Cleveland club of the American league, hung up his glove in the summer of 1916.

Lajoie had an uncanny eye at the plate. A pitcher had a hard time walking "Nap" if he didn't chose to take a stroll to first. Many a time have I seen him swing at a high or wide one and clout the ball for extra bases.

Lajoie and Ty Cobb, outfield star of the old Detroit Tigers were batting rivals for many years in earlier days of the American league. Their keenest race was staged in 1910, when, competing for a prize auto offered to the league's champion batter, Lajoie and Cobb swept down to the final game of the season in a virtual deadlock for the championship. Final averages gave Cobb the edge by the fraction of a point, but the race had been so close that the automobile company also awarded a machine to the Cleveland infield star.

The styles and temperaments of these two great batters, Lajoie and Cobb, were as far apart as the two poles. Ty was a bundle of nervous energy, full of moods, a firebrand. Lajoie was easy-going, good-natured, unruffled by the breaks of the game.

In the field Lajoie was easy and graceful, making the hard chances look simple. He seldom received credit for being the really great defensive player that he was because he was such a fine batsman.

Lajoie broke into baseball in 1896 and left the big leagues in 1916. For those twenty-one years he averaged .325 with the bat. His best year, 1901, he hit .422. He managed Cleveland from 1904 to 1911. Lajoie led American league batters for four years—1901, 1902, 1904, 1905.

DOWNTOWNERS DEFEAT LANGS; TIE HARNESS FOR FIRST PLACE

Recording its fourth straight victory, The Downtown Country Club softball team slipped back into a tie with the Harness Cigars for first place in the National League by trimming the Lang Chevrolet Co. nine, 9 to 3 Thursday night at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Bunching their thirteen hits to good advantage the Downtowners scored twice in each of the first, third and sixth innings and added three more markers for good measure in the eighth. Langs tallied one run in each of the second, fourth and eighth rounds.

R. Finlay and Huston led the assault on Doak, Lang's pitcher, each making three hits. Finlay knocked a home run with one on base in the sixth. Leahey, Lang third baseman, accounted for three of his team's eight hits.

Leroy Doak pitched for Langs with Randall behind the plate. Frame and McCurran formed the battery for the D. T. C. Club.

Coates Barber Shop and the Rotary Club will play off a postponed American League game Friday night. Lineups:

WILBERFORCE WILL OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR LARGE ENDOWMENT

Tuesday, June 11 will be a red letter day at Wilberforce University.

On that day the university's million dollar endowment drive will be launched with special exercises.

Charles F. Jones, private secretary of Governor Myers Y. Cooper, will be the speaker at the afternoon meeting. Mr. Jones will come as a personal representative of the governor. He is nationally known as secretary of of the late Senator F. B. Willis.

In the evening Robert S. Abbott, editor of the Chicago Defender, leading colored weekly, will deliver the chief address. Mr. Abbott is well known in the newspaper field and is in demand for addresses all over the country.

His address will set the stage for an appeal for the endowment goal.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Wilberforce University Quartet, which has enjoyed a successful year of touring the East and Middle West. There will also be a trained chorus of twenty-five voices.

The public is being invited to attend both meetings.

SPORT SHOTS

The Cleveland Indians have played but one game in Boston on Sunday. And they lost it.

* * *

Clarence DeMar, six-time Boston marathon winner, will run in Los Angeles marathon June 15.

* * *

Wyllis Terry of Yale made the longest run to touchdown in football history when he galloped 115 yards in 1884.

* * *

Ken Strong, New York University grid star, hopes to play pro baseball in New England. He lives in West Haven, Conn.

* * *

Jim Bottomley, most valuable National league player last season, went direct from high school diamond to the St. Louis Cardinals.

* * *

* * *

Yale beat Princeton, fifteen times in seventeen years, at football, from 1900 to 1916, losing only in 1903 and 1911.

BEACHES RUINED

ASHTABULA, O., June 7.—Heavy storms of the past spring and the high water level of Lake Erie have combined to seriously affect beaches along the Ashtabula County shore line. The beach line, on the whole, has been set bacq from two to trhee feet by the high water and this has resulted in inundating the beach in some localities.

BRAVES SHOW FANS THEY MEAN IT

Getting off to a flying start, smacking Brooklyn's touted pitchers (including mighty Dazzy Vance) with great gusto, and leading the National league for first few days of season, Boston's rejuvenated Braves have demonstrated they meant it when they said their "door mat" days were over. Above are Jumping Joe Dugan, left, and Pat Collins, former Yankees trying for comebacks with the Braves. Inset is Judge Emil Fuchs, Braves president-manager.

OLD TIMERS TODAY

In Which George Stovall Writes About Nap Lajoie, Great Hitter.

By GEORGE STOVALL
Former Big League Star First Baseman and Former Manager of Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Kansas City Federals. Written Expressly for Central Press and The Gazette

A sun-bronzed, willowy man goes about Cleveland these days meeting baseball fans whose god he once was. He is Napoleon Lajoie, tire salesman, to some folks. But to the Forest City's host of baseball fans he is Larry Lajoie, brilliant diamondeer of another day.

Now that his playing days are over, Lajoie is playing the game of business just as hard as he did the national pastime. Lajoie should find business good in the town whose baseball fortunes he once guided as manager of the Cleveland Naps (now Indians) and where he played so brilliantly.

One of baseball's most graceful and natural players, and one of the most feared batters of all time passed out of the game when Lajoie, a star second baseman and former teammate of mine on the Cleveland club of the American league, hung up his glove in the summer of 1916.

Lajoie had an uncanny eye at the plate. A pitcher had a hard time walking "Nap" if he didn't chose to take a stroll to first. Many a time have I seen him swing at a high or wide one and clout the ball for extra bases.

Lajoie and Ty Cobb, outfield star of the old Detroit Tigers were batting rivals for many years in earlier days of the American league. Their keenest race was staged in 1910, when, competing for a prize auto offered to the league's champion batter, Lajoie and Cobb swept down to the final game of the season in a virtual deadlock for the championship. Final averages gave Cobb the edge by the fraction of a point, but the race had been so close that the automobile company also awarded a machine to the Cleveland infield star.

The styles and temperaments of these two great batters, Lajoie and Cobb, were as far apart as the two poles. Ty was a bundle of nervous energy, full of moods, a firebrand. Lajoie was easy-going, good-natured, unruffled by the breaks of the game.

In the field Lajoie was easy and graceful, making the hard chances look simple. He seldom received credit for being the really great defensive player that he was because he was such a fine batsman.

Lajoie broke into baseball in 1896 and left the big leagues in 1916. For those twenty-one years he averaged .325 with the bat. His best year, 1901, he hit .422. He managed Cleveland from 1904 to 1911. Lajoie led American league batters for four years—1901, 1902, 1904, 1905.

BOBBED HAIR STILL VOGUE BEAUTY SHOW ENTRIES INDICATE

GALVESTON, Texas, June 7. — Long hair hasn't come back—decidedly not! Nor do gentlemen if artists, sculptors and the like may be called that—take to the cuddlesome blondes.

For a composite of the entries for this year's International pageant of Pulchritude to open here today along Galveston's famous seawall boulevard indicates that a brunette with shorn locks, slightly above medium height and tending to stateliness rather than cuteness will be "Miss Universe" of 1929.

Galveston has already welcomed eight Europeans and found them differing only linguistically from the short-haired, short-skirted girls one sees in America. Only two were blondes — Engebord Grahne, Miss Germany; and Germaine Laborde, Miss France. The others—Rosario Valazques, Miss Spain; Magda Demetresou, Miss Roumania; Lise Goldarbeiter, Miss Austria; Benny Bicks, Miss England; Ketty Hipp, Miss Luxembourg and Johanna Koopmann, Miss Holland—all being brunettes as are Senorita Olga Bergimini De Sa, Miss Brazil and Consuelo Boullosa, Miss Cuba.

There are slightly more than forty entries this year with some twenty states and ten American cities represented.

Pageant events proper include two parades, one today in sport frocks and afternoon costumes and the other tomorrow in bathing costumes. Monday and Tuesday night two big stage shows are to be held at city auditorium at which internationally known judges will pick the winners. Wednesday night a banquet in honor of the new Miss Universe will be held.

Lawn fetes, boat rides, teas, balls and other entertainments have been arranged for the girls while they are here.

PRIVATE HAULERS EXEMPT FROM LAW

Private contract haulers are exempt under the law which provides that all common carriers operating trucks for hire must first obtain a certificate from the public utilities commission before operating, Dilver Belden, auto club secretary, has been advised by the commission.

To be classed as private contract haulers, however, drivers must have a written contract showing they are employed by a private company over a regular route.

The information on the status of private contract haulers, especially those on milk routes, was sought by the auto club secretary as a result of more than fifty inquiries received by him lately with reference to an interpretation of house bill No. 141.

Watch for this danger signal—a dirty ring around the washtubs

HAVE you seen it in your washtubs? Of course you have! Do you know what it means? Of course you know that it means the washing has been done in hard water. Soap combined with the hardness and made scum. The scum collected dirt, some went into the clothes, some formed the dirty ring.

Soften hard water with Melo and it becomes a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. No dirty ring! White clothes! Soap saved, from ⅓ to ½ the amount ordinarily used. Use Melo wherever you need soft water. Notice how much more effective the soap is! Get Melo at your grocer's.

BOBBED HAIR STILL VOGUE BEAUTY SHOW ENTRIES INDICATE

GALVESTON, Texas, June 7. — Long hair hasn't come back—decidedly not! Nor do gentlemen if artists, sculptors and the like may be called that—take to the cuddlesome blondes.

For a composite of the entries for this year's International pageant of Pulchritude to open here today along Galveston's famous seawall boulevard indicates that a brunette with shorn locks, slightly above medium height and tending to stateliness rather than cuteness will be "Miss Universe" of 1929.

Galveston has already welcomed eight Europeans and found them differing only linguistically from the short-haired, short-skirted girls one sees in America. Only two were blondes — Engebord Grahne, Miss Germany; and Germaine Laborde, Miss France. The others—Rosario Valazques, Miss Spain; Magda Demetreson, Miss Roumania; Lise Goldarbelter, Miss Austria; Benny Bicks, Miss England; Kitty Hipp, Miss Luxembourg and Johanna Koopmann, Miss Holland—all being brunettes as are Senorita Olga Bergimini De Sa, Miss Brazil and Consuelo Boullosa, Miss Cuba.

There are slightly more than forty entries this year with some twenty states and ten American cities represented.

Pageant events proper include two parades, one today in sport frocks and afternoon costumes and the other tomorrow in bathing costumes. Monday and Tuesday night two big stage shows are to be held at city auditorium at which internationally known judges will pick the winners. Wednesday night a banquet in honor of the new Miss Universe will be held.

Lawn fetes, boat rides, teas, balls and other entertainments have been arranged for the girls while they are here.

PRIVATE HAULERS EXEMPT FROM LAW

Private contract haulers are exempt under the law which provides that all common carriers operating trucks for hire must first obtain a certificate from the public utilities commission before operating, Dilver Belden, auto club secretary, has been advised by the commission.

To be classed as private contract haulers, however, drivers must have a written contract showing they are employed by a private company over a regular route.

The information on the status of private contract haulers, especially those on milk routes, was sought by the auto club secretary as a result of more than fifty inquiries received by him lately with reference to an interpretation of house bill No. 141.

CEDARVILLE ENDOWMENT IS INCREASED; BOARD RE-ELECTS

With its endowment increased $40,000 during the school year just closed, Cedarville College experienced the most successful year of its thirty-five years existence, the board of trustees reported at its annual meeting at the college Thursday.

The college is now rated as a half-milion dollar institution inasmuch as the endowment has been increased to $250,000 and a nearly similar amount is invested in the plant itself, which includes four buildings and a nine-acre campus. The school has no indebtedness.

One of the most important steps taken by the trustees was to authorize appointment of a field representative. A committee composed of Probate Judge S. C. Wright, the Rev. W. P. Harriman and Dr. M. I. Marsh, all of Cedarville, members of the board, was named with full authority to employ such an agent. His duties will be to make more contacts to increase the endowment and enroll new students.

A bequest of between $5,000 and $6,000 from the estate of Harriet L. Ritchie of New York City, an old friend of the college, is anticipated by the trustees. After specific bequests are carried out the college will benefit from the residuary. The estate is now in process of settlement.

Hearing the annual reports of the treasurer and President W. R. McChesney, the board re-elected all former officers as follows: Dr. J. Alvin Orr, pastor of the First U. P. Church, Pittsburgh, Pa., president; Dr. M. I. Marsh, Cedarville, vice-president; Probate Judge S. C. Wright, Cedarville, secretary, and Prof. F. A. Jurkat, treasurer.

Five members of the board whose terms expired were re-elected as follows: George H. Hartman, W. C. Iliffe and Dr. W. R. McChesney, Cedarville; Dr. William R. Graham, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Lafayette, Ind., and Dr. J. A. Orr, Pittsburgh.

Dr. Marsh presided at the all-day board session in the absence of Dr. Orr, who was unable to be present. Three other trustees were also unable to attend the session.

CITY SPEED LIMITS WILL PROBABLY BE CHANGED HERE SOON

City Commission will probably find it necessary to act as its next regular meeting to change a city ordinance fixing maximum speed limits for Xenia in order to conform with the Boden law, effective July 21, which permits a speed of twenty-five miles an hour in the business districts and thirty-five miles an hour in the residential districts.

The present speed limits of Xenia of fifteen and twenty-five miles an hour conform with the state law as it now stands but, if not repealed in the meantime, will be rendered inoperative when the new state law goes into effect.

A decision of the state supreme court reversing the conviction of a man who had driven in excess of twenty-five miles an hour in the city of Lakewood, is interpreted to mean that ordinances of Ohio municipalities fixing arbitrary maximum speed limits are rendered inoperative.

However, the court's ruling, in the opinion of city officials, will not change the situation in Xenia, where enforcement of traffic laws is carried out along the line of the supreme court's decision Wednesday.

They Went, They Saw and Conquered

Left to right, Reg Robbins and wife, and Jim Kelly and wife, getting their domestic reward after they broke all existing endurance records by remaining aloft over 172 hours, or seven days, over Fort Worth, Texas. CADET BAND PLANS FAREWELL CONCERT

Arrangements have been completed for a farewell public band concert to be given by the O. S. and S. O. Home Cadet Band under the direction of Prof. H. E. Seall in the auditorium in Shawnee Park next Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

The concert is being sponsored by Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion and an attractive musical program is being arranged.

Seven or more members of the band will be graduated from the Home this year and it will be the last opportunity of Xenians to hear the group with his present personnel.

However, the band will stay at the institution longer than a majority of the other pupils in order to play for the exercises incidental to the annual reunion of the Ex-Pupils Association in July.

Jiggs, Mascot on History-Making Flight

Jiggs, inimitable hero of George McManus's popular comic strip, "Bringing Up Father," is serving as mascot for Major Spatz on his non-stop, round-trip, refueling flight from San Diego to New York. The figure of Jiggs may be plainly discerned on the "ship," and in the foreground stands Major Spatz, who attained fame as pilot for the Question Mark in its endurance test. The new flight is made to demonstrate how the Army could increase the effective range of bombers during wartime.

Rival Planes Set Courses Across the Ocean

AND NOW—GREATEST SALARY TEAM

When John Gilbert and Ina Claire, film notables, slipped away and tied the marital knot the other day they gave salary statisticians something to think about. For the two together now have an annual income of something like $1,280,000 with which to keep the wolf from the door. Mrs. Gilbert, left, draws the lion's share, $780,000, while her husband, right, above, has a $500,000 annual income. President Hoover, below, does not earn as much in a year as the film team does in a month, while the sum total of the salaries in the Hoover cabinet, $150,000. is dwarfed by that of the Claire-Gilbert income.

SHE'LL REPRESENT NEW ENGLAND

Rita Breault, 21, of Pawtucket, R. I., has won the right to represent New England in national biennial young artists' contest in Boston, June 8, conducted by the National Music Clubs' association. Two years ago, at Chicago, Miss Breault won the national students' piano championship.

Axe Killer Victims

Birmingham, Ala., police have been baffled by the eleventh axe murder in seven year since the death of Beverly W. Wharton, above. His wife, Margaret, top, was hit on the head by the intruder after he clubbed her sleeping husband to death. Their two children were unhurt.

INVESTIGATION COMMITTEES PROBE CLINIC BLAST

Numerous investigations are underway into the exact cause of the Cleveland Clinic disaster which took 130 lives and injured many at Cleveland. Photo shows one of the city investigating committees inspecting the damaged building where the explosion occurred. They are, left to right, G. W. Erdman, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' association; L. F. Aubrecht, city electrician; W. D. Guion, city building commissioner; Dr. R. D. McLaurin, city waste expert; Dr. Harry L. Rockwood, city health commissioner.

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT HAT?

Bucky Harris, manager of the Detroit Tigers, views his new lid from several angles. An arrangement of mirrors made possible all these poses in one shot.

Cop Bests Thugs

Three Windsor, Ont., bandits on a night cruise, tackled a wildcat when they crowded into the ditch a car driven by Dilworth McClellan, former cavalry lieutenant, now a Detroit policeman. He killed one and wounded another. The third escaped.

Jammed Door Let Gases Escape

PRIDE OF PURDUE AWARDED TROPHY

Movie Fashions

This is a reversible coat of blue and white printed crepe on one side and white jersey cloth on the other. It is worn by Laura La-Plante with white skirt, white satin blouse and white felt hat.

SENATOR PLAYS STOWAWAY JOKE

Just for a joke Benjamin Hahn, California state senator, pretended he was a stowaway on the ship which was carrying his brother, Judge Edwin Hahn, to Hawaii. After bidding the judge goodbye Hahn pretended to disembark, then, when the ship was well out to sea, he knocked on the judge's stateroom door. The joke was perpetrated with the aid of the ship's officers. Judge Hahn is at the left and the stowaway senator at right.

Domesticated Queen

Cooking holds more thrills than dancing for Miss Margaret E. Stark, who has been chosen queen of the Toledo university, Toledo, O., to reign until 1930.

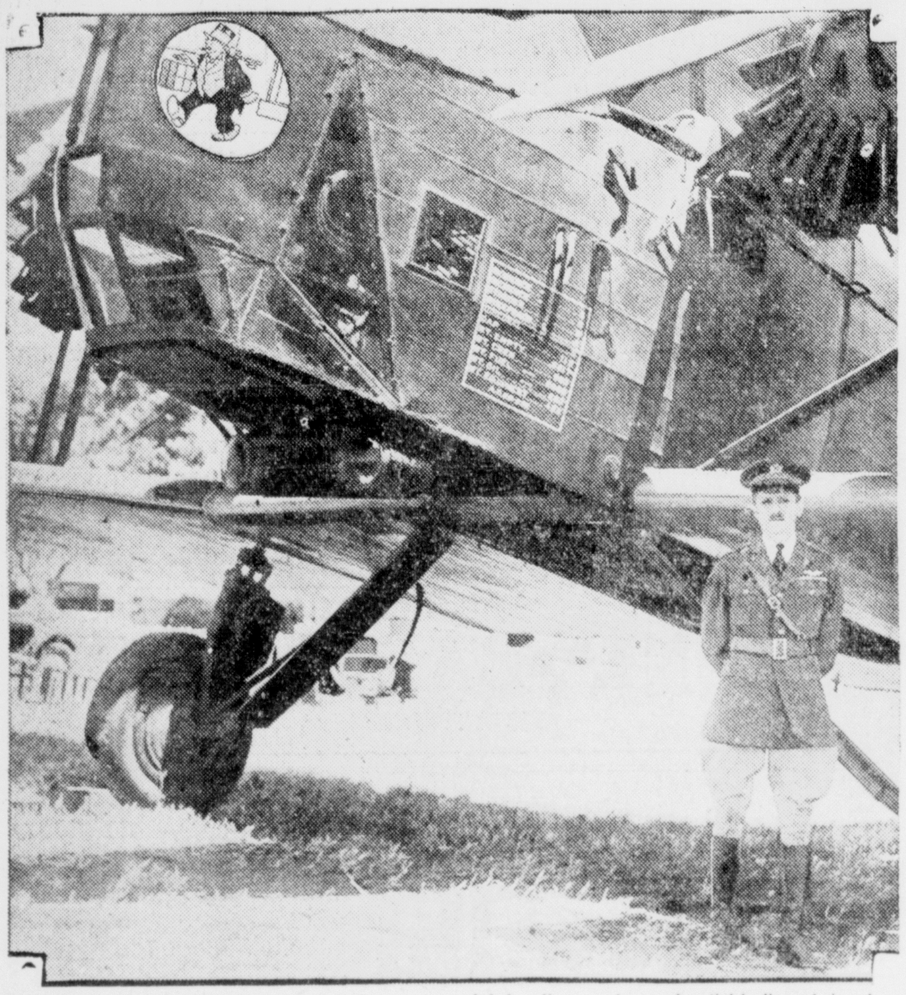

Two Happy Mothers-in-Law

SHE'LL REPRESENT NEW ENGLAND

Rita Breault, 21, of Pawtucket, R. I., has won the right to represent New England in national biennial young artists' contest in Boston, June 8, conducted by the National Music Clubs' association. Two years ago, at Chicago, Miss Breault won the national students' piano championship.

Axe Killer Victims

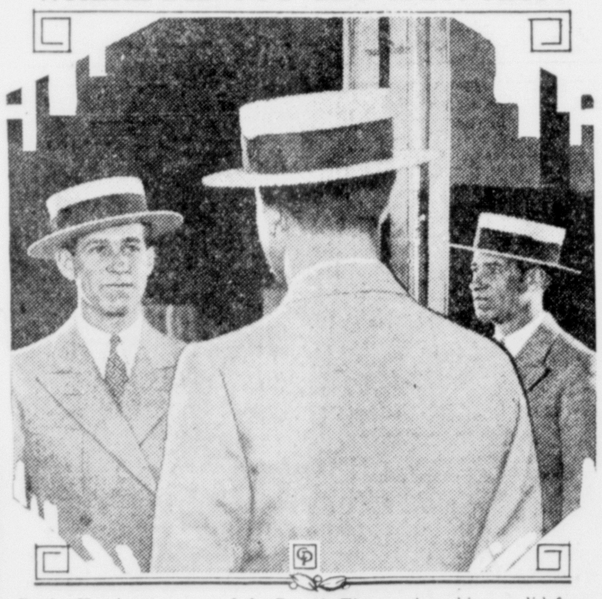

Birmingham, Ala., police have been baffled by the eleventh axe murder in seven year since the death of Beverly W. Wharton, above. His wife, Margaret, top, was hit on the head by the intruder after he clubbed her sleeping husband to death. Their two children were unhurt.

Jammed Door Let Gases Escape

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT HAT?

Bucky Harris, manager of the Detroit Tigers, views his new lid from several angles. An arrangement of mirrors made possible all these poses in one shot.

Cop Bests Thugs

Three Windsor, Ont., bandits on a night cruise, tackled a wildcat when they crowded into the ditch a car driven by Dilworth McClellan, former cavalry lieutenant, now a Detroit policeman. He killed one and wounded another. The third escaped.

PRIDE OF PURDUE AWARDED TROPHY

Movie Fashions

This is a reversible coat of blue and white printed crepe on one side and white jersey cloth on the other. It is worn by Laura La-Plante with white skirt, white satin blouse and white felt hat.

SENATOR PLAYS STOWAWAY JOKE

Just for a joke Benjamin Hahn, California state senator, pretended he was a stowaway on the ship which was carrying his brother, Judge Edwin Hahn, to Hawaii. After bidding the judge goodbye Hahn pretended to disembark, then, when the ship was well out to sea, he knocked on the judge's stateroom door. The joke was perpetrated with the aid of the ship's officers. Judge Hahn is at the left and the stowaway senator at right.

Domesticated Queen

Cooking holds more thrills than dancing for Miss Margaret E. Stark, who has been chosen queen of the Toledo university, Toledo, O., to reign until 1930.

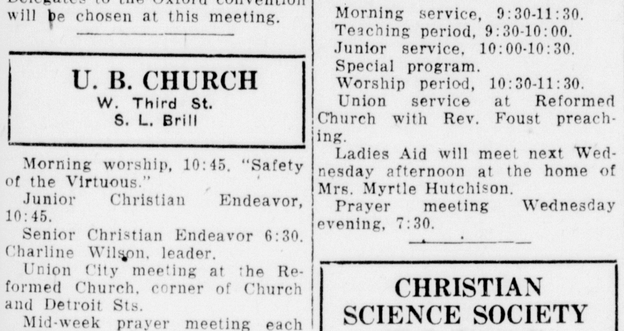

Two Happy Mothers-in-Law

Left, Mrs. Morrow, wife of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow and mother of Miss Anne Morrow, who married Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, famous flyer, in a surprise wedding at the Englewood, N. J., home of the Morrows. Right, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, the modest mother of Lindy, who has been in the public eye ever since the memorable solo flight which her son made to Paris two years ago. Here are two mothers who have every reason in the world to take an abundance of pride in their children, but who are nevertheless distinguished for their modesty and simplicity.

The Church Invites You

THE CHURCH—THE HOUSE OF PRAYER

Tennyson says, "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice rise like a fountain for me night and day. For what are men better than sheep or goats, that nourish a blind life within the brain, if knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer both for themselves and those who call them friends? For so the whole round earth is every way bound by gold chains about the feet of God."

He says, "Prayer is, to take a mundane simile, like opening a sluice between the great ocean and our little channels when the great sea gathers itself together and flows in at full tide."

The Church is the house of prayer. Few who are able to attend church and fail to do so, really pray at all. Church attendance is essential to the prayer life. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY? — D. Carl Yoder.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

©1927 D.CARL YODER

During the early part of Zedekiah's return, the new king submitted peacefully to his suzerain, the king of Babylon to whom he was bound by oath. Subsequently he was approached by envoys from Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre and Sidon who wanted to form a league with the Judean king against Babylonian supremacy. Jeremiah warned the king against such a league; but when Egypt joined the league, Zedekiah felt he was safe to turn traitor to his sovereign ruler.

V. 1. "And the king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar, came and all his army against Jerusalem, and encamped against it round about." Nebuchadnezzar was one of the ablest sovereigns of history reigning forty-three years; he claimed Palestine by right of conquest; there had been two preceding exiles from the Holy Land to Babylon; as subjects of Babylon all that were left in the Holy Land were to be his loyal subjects. When the people of Judah took arms against Babylon, the king proceeded to end all further attempts by a final suppression and exile, he himself leading the army and thoroughly subduing all outside of Jerusalem.

V. 2. "The city was besieged unto the eleventh year of King Zedekiah." Zedekiah, showing he would likely be trapped, succeeded in securing enough of food supplies to stand the siege of one year and a half.

V. 3. "On the ninth day of the fourth month, the famine was sore in the city, so there was no bread for the people of the land." Jeremiah in "Lamentations" describes the famine as the worst in the world's history—"The complexion of the men grew black with famine; their skin was shrunk and parched; the rich and noble women searched the dunghills for scraps of offal; the children perished for want and were even devoured by their parents, a third part of the inhabitants died."

Vs. 4, 5. "Then a breach was made in the city, and all the men of war fled by night; and the king went by the way of Arabah. But the army of the Chadeans pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and all his army were scattered from him." Jerusalem's repeated rebellion had now marked it for total destruction. This was the end of the city that sat thereon the height of privilege and power so defiant and scornful in its idolatry and guilt. The same judgment is written against our personal sins, and it is equally true that the soul that sinneth shall die.

Vs. 8, 9. "The captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon came unto Jerusalem and he burnt the house of Jehovah and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, even every great house, burned he with fire." The innocent suffer when leaders are disloyal and untrue to themselves and to God.

V. 12. "But the captain of the guard left of the poorest in the land to be vinedressers and husbandmen." It was not profitable to deport the very poor. Nevertheless there were great possibilities in the future of Jerusalem. God cannot be defeated.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

©1927 D.CARL YODER

1. Why did Nebuchadnezzar proceed against Jerusalem?
2. Why did Zebediah, king of Judah, not remain true to his agreement with Nebuchadnezzar?
3. Why was Nebuchadnezzar, a heathen, allowed to carry into captivity the people of Jerusalem and why was his captain allowed to burn God's sacred temple?
4. Why do people constantly forget God?
5. What are our greatest national dangers?

Clericus says, "Judah did not worry about her sins but she dreaded captivity and enslavement the consequences of sin. What deters multitudes of people from dishonesty and theft and murder is not the thought that these are inherently wrong and that whoever practices them is guilty of a sword thrust at the moral order; they are deterred because they fear the consequences of being caught. Right is right and wrong is wrong. This is eternally so and our lives ought to be set in tune with this principle."

Lesson Prayer, "We pray for that conscientious thinking and willing that whether others may know or not know our deeds, we shall always do the right. Without help from God, we shall fail in heart life."

Junior boys and girls naturally do not care for the decorated chair which delighted them when they were in the primary department. Instead, try this. Have an American flag on a standard, and when a birthday is to be observed, place this beside the honor child. Explain that the junior is growing older; he will soon reach the age when he may vote; but even a younger boy and girl may be a good citizen. Suggest the various ways of being good citizens, such as obeying laws, not defacing public property, keeping homes and premises in order and the like. Have the entire class stand and salute the flag. A small flag, a flag button or something of like nature may be given as a special gift to the child whose birthday is being observed.

WE BUILD TOO LOW

One of the legends told of St. Thomas, the patron saint of masons and carpenters, concerns a palace he was commissioned to build for Gondoferus, the King of the Indes. It was to be the most beautiful palace in the world. No money was to be spared in its building and Gondoferus handed over to St. Thomas vast treasures he had gathered for the palace. Having bade the builder to begin forthwith, the king departed for a distant province of his empire. After two years he returned, but though he looked everywhere for his palace, it was nowhere to be seen. The treasure had all disappeared, yet no timber had been hewn nor had any stone been laid upon another.

The king was angry and Thomas was flung into a dungeon, preparatory to being burned at the stake. In the meantime the king's brother died. At the end of four days he appeared to Gondoferus, warning him to do no harm to the builder. For in a vision he had been led by an angel into heaven and had seen there a palace built of all kinds of precious stones. As he marvelled at it, the angel told him it was the palace built for King Gondoferus by St. Thomas with the money he had given to the widows and fatherless, the sick and the needy.

St. Thomas was then set free and the legend says the king learned his lesson in a divine architecture he had never known before. "They build too low who build beneath the skies."

"ONLY YOUTH CAN END WARS"

Lord George in an address before the seventh world convention of the Christian Endeavor Movement said, "Each generation has its task and the supreme task of the gengrations that are arising is to achieve the substitution of organized justice for organized violence. We old fellows were brought up in a world that regarded armaments and occasional wars as a part of the grim essentials of human civilization. Youth must get away from that idea. You must get rid of the idea that you can settle disputes only by an appeal to force. Whether it is guns or cannons, strikes and lockouts, they are all part of the barbarism of the past. Europe has been drinking of armaments until it has gotten delirium tremens and is going on drinking secretly now. Youth must take it in hand. I believe in a bright future. Let them make it."

Champ Hitch-Hiker

Transcontinental hitch-hike record is claimed by Cornelius G. Scheid, 27, university graduate who crossed from Boston to Los Angeles in eight days, with a total expense of $4.80, none of which was spent for transportation. He rode in everything from sedans to open trucks.

THE CHURCH—THE HOUSE OF PRAYER

Tennyson says, "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice rise like a fountain for me night and day. For what are men better than sheep or goats, that nourish a blind life within the brain, if knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer both for themselves and those who call them friends? For so the whole round earth is every way bound by gold chains about the feet of God."

He says, "Prayer is, to take a mundane simile, like opening a sluice between the great ocean and our little channels when the great sea gathers itself together and flows in at full tide."

The Church is the house of prayer. Few who are able to attend church and fail to do so, really pray at all. Church attendance is essential to the prayer life. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY? — D. Carl Yoder.

During the early part of Zedekiah's return, the new king submitted peacefully to his suzerain, the king of Babylon to whom he was bound by oath. Subsequently he was approached by envoys from Edom, Moab, Ammon, Tyre and Sidon who wanted to form a league with the Judean king against Babylonian supremacy. Jeremiah warned the king against such a league; but when Egypt joined the league, Zedekiah felt he was safe to turn traitor to his sovereign ruler.

V. 1. "And the king of Babylon, Nebuchadnezzar, came and all his army against Jerusalem, and encamped against it round about." Nebuchadnezzar was one of the ablest sovereigns of history reigning forty-three years; he claimed Palestine by right of conquest; there had been two preceding exiles from the Holy Land to Babylon; as subjects of Babylon all that were left in the Holy Land were to be his loyal subjects. When the people of Judah took arms against Babylon, the king proceeded to end all further attempts by a final suppression and exile, he himself leading the army and thoroughly subduing all outside of Jerusalem.

V. 2. "The city was besieged unto the eleventh year of King Zedekiah." Zedekiah, showing he would likely be trapped, succeeded in securing enough of food supplies to stand the siege of one year and a half.

V. 3. "On the ninth day of the fourth month, the famine was sore in the city, so there was no bread for the people of the land." Jeremiah in "Lamentations" describes the famine as the worst in the world's history—"The complexion of the men grew black with famine; their skin was shrunk and parched; the rich and noble women searched the dunghills for scraps of offal; the children perished for want and were even devoured by their parents, a third part of the inhabitants died."

Vs. 4, 5. "Then a breach was made in the city, and all the men of war fled by night; and the king went by the way of Arabah. But the army of the Chadeans pursued after the king, and overtook him in the plains of Jericho; and all his army were scattered from him." Jerusalem's repeated rebellion had now marked it for total destruction. This was the end of the city that sat thereon the height of privilege and power so defiant and scornful in its idolatry and guilt. The same judgment is written against our personal sins, and it is equally true that the soul that sinneth shall die.

Vs. 8, 9. "The captain of the guard, a servant of the king of Babylon came unto Jerusalem and he burnt the house of Jehovah and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, even every great house, burned he with fire." The innocent suffer when leaders are disloyal and untrue to themselves and to God.

V. 12. "But the captain of the guard left of the poorest in the land to be vinedressers and husbandmen." It was not profitable to deport the very poor. Nevertheless there were great possibilities in the future of Jerusalem. God cannot be defeated.

Discussion Questions on S.S. Lesson

©1927 D. CARL YODER

1. Why did Nebuchadnezzar proceed against Jerusalem?
2. Why did Zebediah, king of Judah, not remain true to his agreement with Nebuchadnezzar?
3. Why was Nebuchadnezzar, a heathen, allowed to carry into captivity the people of Jerusalem and why was his captain allowed to burn God's sacred temple?
4. Why do people constantly forget God?
5. What are our greatest national dangers?

Clericus says, "Judah did not worry about her sins but she dreaded captivity and enslavement the consequences of sin. What deters multitudes of people from dishonesty and theft and murder is not the thought that these are inherently wrong and that whoever practices them is guilty of a sword thrust at the moral order; they are deterred because they fear the consequences of being caught. Right is right and wrong is wrong. This is eternally so and our lives ought to be set in tune with this principle."

Lesson Prayer. "We pray for that conscientious thinking and willing that whether others may know or not know our deeds, we shall always do the right. Without help from God, we shall fail in heart life."

BOOK REVIEW

"Parents and Teachers," by Mason, Ginn and Company is a survey of organized co-operation of home, school and community prepared under the auspices of the National Congress of parents and teachers. It deals with the principles of education, the contribution of the home and the school to education.

Junior boys and girls naturally do not care for the decorated chair which delighted them when they were in the primary department. Instead, try this. Have an American flag on a standard, and when a birthday is to be observed, place this beside the honor child. Explain that the junior is growing older; he will soon reach the age when he may vote; but even a younger boy and girl may be a good citizen. Suggest the various ways of being good citizens, such as obeying laws, not defacing public property, keeping homes and premises in order and the like. Have the entire class stand and salute the flag. A small flag, a flag button or something of like nature may be given as a special gift to the child whose birthday is being observed.

WE BUILD TOO LOW

One of the legends told of St. Thomas, the patron saint of masons and carpenters, concerns a palace he was commissioned to build for Gondoferus, the King of the Indes. It was to be the most beautiful palace in the world. No money was to be spared in its building and Gondoferus handed over to St. Thomas vast treasures he had gathered for the palace. Having bade the builder to begin forthwith, the king departed for a distant province of his empire. After two years he returned, but though he looked everywhere for his palace, it was nowhere to be seen. The treasure had all disappeared, yet no timber had been hewn nor had any stone been laid upon another.

The king was angry and Thomas was flung into a dungeon, preparatory to being burned at the stake. In the meantime the king's brother died. At the end of four days he appeared to Gondoferus, warning him to do no harm to the builder. For in a vision he had been led by an angel into heaven and had seen there a palace built of all kinds of precious stones. As he marvelled at it, the angel told him it was the palace built for King Gondoferus by St. Thomas with the money he had given to the widows and fatherless, the sick and the needy.

St. Thomas was then set free and the legend says the king learned his lesson in a divine architecture he had never known before. "They build too low who build beneath the skies."

"ONLY YOUTH CAN END WARS"

Lord George in an address before the seventh world convention of the Christian Endeavor Movement said, "Each generation has its task and the supreme task of the generations that are arising is to achieve the substitution of organized justice for organized violence. We old fellows were brought up in a world that regarded armaments and occasional wars as a part of the grim essentials of human civilization. Youth must get away from that idea. You must get rid of the idea that you can settle disputes only by an appeal to force. Whether it is guns or cannons, strikes and lockouts, they are all part of the barbarism of the past. Europe has been drinking of armaments until it has gotten delirium tremens and is going on drinking secretly now. Youth must take it in hand. I believe in a bright future. Let them make it."

Champ Hitch-Hiker

Transcontinental hitch-hike record is claimed by Cornelius G. Scheid, 27, university graduate who crossed from Boston to Los Angeles in eight days, with a total expense of $4.80, none of which was spent for transportation. He rode in everything from sedans to open trucks.

THE FLAT TIRE
A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

By Alma Sioux Scarberry, Author of "Make Up" Etc.

© 1929 Central Press Assn Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, 20, is looked upon as a "flat tire" in the younger set of Bender, Kan. Found on the doorstep of Martha Matthews, an old maid, when a small baby, she knows nothing of her parents. This has made her shy and bitter. She feels no one even likes her because she is a "nobody." Kentworth Hillman Johns III, scion of the town's leading family, home after graduating from Kansas University, passes by the Matthews cottage and teases Vivian about being the same little "Sally Sad Eye Sit by the Fire." He prescribes marriage for her and tells her Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen and her mother are returning from Paris in two weeks and that they are to be married. Later the thud of the "Times Democrat" on the porch brings the startling headline: "Local Belle Weds Rich Count."

Patricia Sullivan, Vivian's best friend, known on Broadway as Cuddles Namara, returns to Bender after four years of trying to make a success on the stage. Cuddles bawls Vivian out severely for her inferiority complex, then sympathetically promises to help her improve her appearance and make friends.

Pat and Vivian are returning from a shopping trip to Salina when they meet Kent, and he amazes Vivian by asking for a date that night. He mysteriously drives her into the country among a grove of trees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

* * *

CHAPTER IV

"First," Kent looked into her face seriously, and spoke very low, "I want you to solemnly swear to me that you will never breathe a word of what we talk tonight—of what I tell you—if the idea sounds crazy to you."

"You can trust me implicitly," Vivian told him quietly. "I swear never to tell anyone what you have told me."

"It is this," Kent plunged. "My grandfather, when he died three months ago, left everything in the world he had to me. It was a million dollars. But this was with the understanding that I was to marry before I get any of it. I didn't know this when I became engaged to Dovie, of course. Grandfather was always a queer eccentric old fellow—and I don't know what his idea was. But, Dovie threw me over cold—you know all that—and I am through with women."

Vivian sat like a girl of stone beside him as he went on.

"I'm through with women. I had loved Dovie all my life, and believed her. There can never be another girl in my life that I can possibly love. I could never believe in anyone else—after this. Ever since the evening we talked there at your gate—the evening I read of Dovie's marriage in the paper, I have thought of you—and how you said your life was so empty. You seem to have no more to live for than I have."

He stopped, as though it were very hard to tell his story, and Vivian was unable to speak.

"They say that money can't buy happiness, Viv. But it can certainly help a lot. I don't want to lose all my grandfather's money. It seems foolish. I brought you out here tonight to make a cold-blooded business proposition to you. Forgive me please, if I hurt you and if you can't accept it. May I go on?"

"Yes," Vivian looked at him curiously. "I am listening."

"It is this." He took her hand as he might have a sister. "You are a decent girl. You have had a rotten life. You don't even know who you are. I want you to gamble with me on this. Remember, I trust you and know you are incapable of double crossing me in any way."

Vivian sank back in her seat—waiting. He held her hand tightly, and bent and looked into her face:

"I want you to marry me—for one year."

Her hands trembled, and she closed her eyes weakly.

"For one—year—what do you mean?"

"At the end of that time I will give you one hundred thousand dollars and a divorce in Paris. You can't lose anything, Vivian." Here he seemed at a loss for words. "You don't need—to—to live with me. Just live in the same house—and go your way, and I'll go mine. You can have everything you want in the world."

She stopped him with a little cry.

"Oh, you don't know what you are asking!" Her face was ghastly pale in the moonlight—as white as the determined face of the twenty-year-old boy beside her.

"I do know what I am asking. I know I am shocking you."

Then he seemed to remember something, and lifted her head and looked into her face.

"There is someone else—someone you really love."

"No, no!" she answered him, with a little wild laugh, "who would love me? Who would want to marry me?"

He did not understand, and so he put her head again on his shoulder and talked to her as he would a stubborn child.

"Then, Vivian, wouldn't you like a grand adventure like this? Why, that much money will keep you in luxury as long as you live, if you invest it wisely!"

He was talking cold business to her. She nearly laughed in her shock and grief. Then her head began to clear. The night was a warm, sultry, moonlit one. Fireflies played in and out of the trees. She had never in her life before been in the moonlight with any man—and the first occasion had to be a night like this. He wondered why she laughed and pulled away from him.

"Drive a while, Kent," she told him curtly. "I must think. This is—well, a bit of a shock in my well-ordered life."

He started the car, glad that she hadn't turned the proposition down altogether. Then he told himself that of course she wouldn't. No unknown like Viv Matthews could turn Kentworth Hillman Johns down on a proposition like that. Think what the position would mean to her alone—being his wife!

Kent was talking business again.

"I must have this money, Vivian. I can invest it in oil and triple it. I'm sure I can. And if I do, of course I'll make a much larger settlement on you. We'll draw up a regular business contract—not to be broken under any circumstances until the end of a year."

"What about your automobile business here?" she asked him. "You won't give it up altogether."

"Oh, I'll hang on to it, I suppose," he answered her grandly. "But that will only be a drop in the bucket with all this other money. I might play the stock market a little, too."

A little later he plunged a knife into her heart again, when he said innocently, trying to sell his plan:

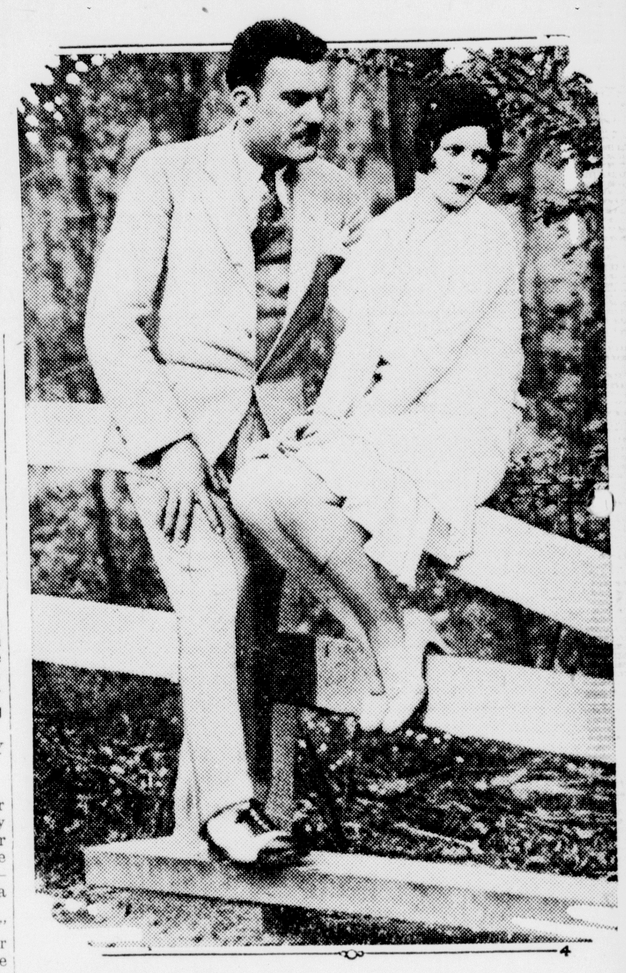

"You see, I want to marry someone I am sure I could never fall in love with. I don't want to be hurt again. You have no one to care whether you do this or not—except old Martha Matthews, and she won't raise any objections to your marrying money."

Vivian looked at him, then, with something akin to wonder that he could say such things so innocently—so utterly oblivious to anyone's feelings but his own. It was, beyond a doubt, as rare an example of ego and conceit as could possibly be found in the world.

But his unhappy look, and his boyish earnestness, burned into her heart long after she had climbed into bed and turned out the light to stare sleeplessly into space. In one thing he was entirely right. She had nothing to lose.

Life, at last, had given her a chance to live! She wondered what Cuddles would do in her place. Cuddles would help her decide—tomorrow.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

NOTICE

Harry T. McDorman, whose place of residence is unknown, (and whose last known mail address was care of Virginia Hotel, Columbus, Ohio), will take notice that on the 31st day of January, 1929, The Lagonda-Citizens National Bank of Springfield, Ohio, filed its petition in the Court of Common Pleas of Greene County, Ohio, in Case No. 18,428 against him and The Transcontinental Consolidated Operating Corporation, praying that the dower from said Harry T. McDorman in said corporation for his interest in certain real estate in Ross Township, Greene County, Ohio, consisting of about 220 acres, (and being the interest in real estate devised to him by Jahue McDorman, deceased, by Item 3 of his will recorded in Vol. S, at page 331 of the Record of Wills in the Probate Court of Greene County, Ohio), and the transfer by said McDorman to said corporation of his interest in certain chattels consisting of farm equipment, tools, machinery, live stock and grain upon said real estate (and being the real estate and chattels levied on by the sheriff of Greene County, Ohio, under an execution issued upon the judgment rendered January 21, 1929, in the Court of Common Pleas of Clark County, Ohio, in favor of the said The Lagonda Citizens National Bank against Harry T. McDorman) may be set aside and held for naught because the same were made without consideration and in fraud of the rights of creditors of said McDorman and, particularly, the said Plaintiff and that the interest of said Harry T. McDorman in said real estate and chattels be ordered sold for the payment of Plaintiff's claim against him.

Said Harry T. McDorman is required to answer on or before the 27th day of July, 1929, or judgment may be rendered against him and the other Defendants in accordance with the prayer of the petition.

THE FLAT TIRE
A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

By Alma Sioux Scarberry, Author of "Make Up" Etc.

© 1929 Central Press Assn Inc.

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, 20, is looked upon as a "flat tire" in the younger set of Bender, Kan. Found on the doorstep of Martha Matthews, an old maid, when a small baby, she knows nothing of her parents. This has made her shy and bitter. She feels no one even likes her because she is a "nobody." Kentworth Hillman Johns III, scion of the town's leading family, home after graduating from Kansas University, passes by the Matthews cottage and teases Vivian about being the same little "Sally Sad Eye Sit by the Fire." He prescribes marriage for her and tells her Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen and her mother are returning from Paris in two weeks and that they are to be married. Later the thud of the "Times Democrat" on the porch brings the startling headline: "Local Belle Weds Rich Count."

Patricia Sullivan, Vivian's best friend, known on Broadway as Cuddles Namara, returns to Bender after four years of trying to make a success on the stage. Cuddles bawls Vivian out severely for her inferiority complex, then sympathetically promises to help her improve her appearance and make friends.

Pat and Vivian are returning from a shopping trip to Salina when they meet Kent, and he amazes Vivian by asking for a date that night. He mysteriously drives her into the country among a grove of trees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

* * *

CHAPTER IV

"First," Kent looked into her face seriously, and spoke very low, "I want you to solemnly swear to me that you will never breathe a word of what we talk tonight—of what I tell you—if the idea sounds crazy to you."

"You can trust me implicitly," Vivian told him quietly. "I swear never to tell anyone what you have told me."

"It is this," Kent plunged. "My grandfather, when he died three months ago, left everything in the world he had to me. It was a million dollars. But this was with the understanding that I was to marry before I get any of it. I didn't know this when I became engaged to Dovie, of course. Grandfather was always a queer eccentric old fellow—and I don't know what his idea was. But, Dovie threw me over cold—you know all that—and I am through with women."

Vivian sat like a girl of stone beside him as he went on.

"I'm through with women. I had loved Dovie all my life, and believed her. There can never be another girl in my life that I can possibly love. I could never believe in anyone else—after this. Ever since the evening we talked there at your gate—the evening I read of Dovie's marriage in the paper, I have thought of you—and how you said your life was so empty. You seem to have no more to live for than I have."

He stopped, as though it were very hard to tell his story, and Vivian was unable to speak.

"They say that money can't buy happiness, Viv. But it can certainly help a lot. I don't want to lose all my grandfather's money. It seems foolish. I brought you out here tonight to make a cold-blooded business proposition to you. Forgive me please, if I hurt you and if you can't accept it. May I go on?"

"Yes," Vivian looked at him curiously, "I am listening."

"It is this." He took her hand as he might have a sister. "You are a decent girl. You have had a rotten life. You don't even know who you are. I want you to gamble with me on this. Remember, I trust you and know you are incapable of double crossing me in any way."

Vivian sank back in her seat—waiting. He held her hand tightly, and bent and looked into her face:

"I want you to marry me—for one year."

Her hands trembled, and she closed her eyes weakly.

"For one—year—what do you mean?"

"At the end of that time I will give you one hundred thousand dollars and a divorce in Paris. You can't lose anything, Vivian." Here he seemed at a loss for words. "You don't need—to—to live with me. Just live in the same house—and go your way, and I'll go mine. You can have everything you want in the world."

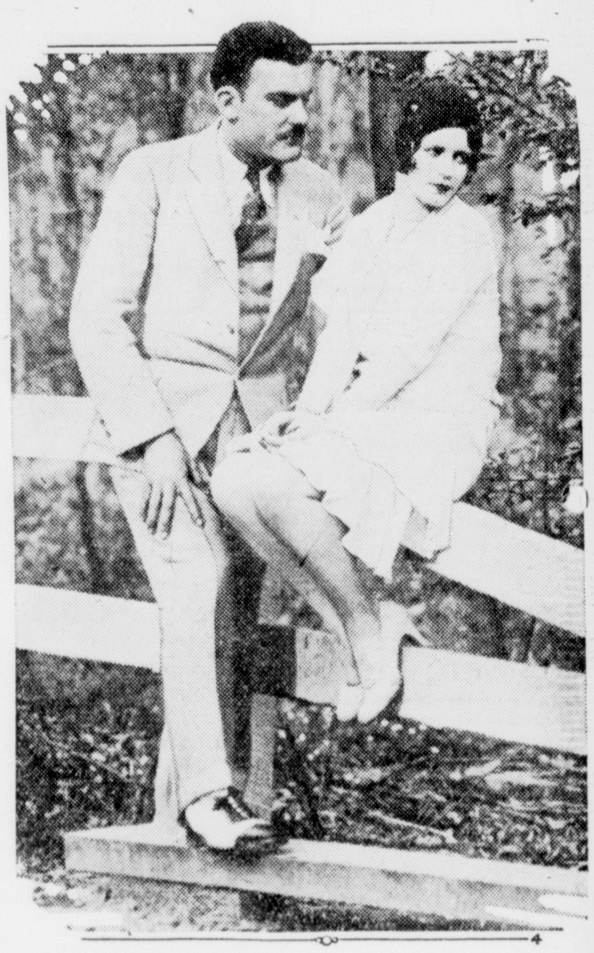

She stopped him with a little cry.

"Oh, you don't know what you are asking!" Her face was ghastly pale in the moonlight—as white as the determined face of the twenty-year-old boy beside her.

"I do know what I am asking. I know I am shocking you."

Then he seemed to remember

"There is someone else—someone you really love?"

"There is someone else—someone you really love."

"No, no!" she answered him, with a little wild laugh, "who would love me? Who would want to marry me?"

He did not understand, and so he put her head again on his shoulder and talked to her as he would a stubborn child.

"Then, Vivian, wouldn't you like a grand adventure like this? Why, that much money will keep you in luxury as long as you live, if you invest it wisely!"

He was talking cold business to her. She nearly laughed in her shock and grief. Then her head began to clear. The night was a warm, sultry, moonlit one. Fireflies played in and out of the trees. She had never in her life before been in the moonlight with any man—and the first occasion had to be a night like this. He wondered why she laughed and pulled away from him.

"Drive a while, Kent," she told him curtly. "I must think. This is—well, a bit of a shock in my well-ordered life."

He started the car, glad that she hadn't turned the proposition down altogether. Then he told himself that of course she wouldn't. No unknown like Viv Matthews could turn Kentworth Hillman Johns down on a proposition like that. Think what the position would mean to her alone—being his wife!

Kent was talking business again.

"I must have this money, Vivian. I can invest it in oil and triple it. I'm sure I can. And if I do, of course I'll make a much larger settlement on you. We'll draw up a regular business contract—not to be broken under any circumstances until the end of a year."

"What about your automobile business here?" she asked him. "You won't give it up altogether."

"Oh, I'll hang on to it, I suppose," he answered her grandly. "But that will only be a drop in the bucket with all this other money. I might play the stock market a little, too."

A little later he plunged a knife into her heart again, when he said innocently, trying to sell his plan:

"You see, I want to marry someone I am sure I could never fall in love with. I don't want to be hurt again. You have no one to care whether you do this or not—except old Martha Matthews, and she won't raise any objections to your marrying money."

Vivian looked at him, then, with something akin to wonder that he could say such things so innocently—so utterly oblivious to anyone's feelings but his own. It was, beyond a doubt, as rare an example of ego and conceit as could possibly be found in the world.

But his unhappy look, and his boyish earnestness, burned into her heart long after she had climbed into bed and turned out the light to stare sleeplessly into space. In one thing he was entirely right. She had nothing to lose.

Life, at last, had given her a chance to live! She wondered what Cuddles would do in her place. Cuddles would help her decide—tomorrow.

BRINGING UP FATHER

The Theater

Such a policy has filled Hollywood with colored performers and those who would be performers. Not the least of these is Nina May McKinley, just 16 years of age, but portraying a leading part in Vidor's picture.

* * *

The director picked Miss McKenney out of a chorus in Lew Leslie's famous "Blackbirds". He brought her to Memphis where he gave her her introduction to the movies. She plays the part of "Chick", a cabaret dancer, who is converted by Zeke, a young evangelist and submits to Baptism by immersion.

She was born in South Carolina, where her early life acquainted her with the revival emotionalism, practically equipping her for the scene she was to play in the movies.

* * *

Miss McKenney likes Gloria Swanson, Joan Crawford and John Gilbert best of all the movie stars and of course, she is very fond of Vidor. Many of them have entertained her. King Vidor was first to entertain for her, then Gloria Swanson gave a party and Alan Hale followed with another, because she is popular with the screen people.

* * *

We present today a picture of Miss Fannie Hurst, who has been in Hollywood preparing her book "Lummox" for the talkie version in which Winifred Westover, the former Mrs. William S. Hart, will star.

Miss Hurst was born in St. Louis, Mo., in 1889 and was graduated from Washington University and Columbia. She made special studies of conditions of working girls, serving as saleswoman, waitress, etc., and made a trip across the Atlantic in the steerage to get material for her stories.

Hers was the first "companionate marriage". She married Jacques S. Danielson in 1915, and since then they have maintained separate establishments, meeting only periodically. She is known best for her stories "Humoresque", "Stardust", "Lummox", "A President is Born", "Mannequin" and others.

The old Bowery Theater, where once Booth, Forrest and Gilbert played, was destroyed by fire Wednesday, and New York loses one of its most historic landmarks. The theater had been devoted to the drama more than 100 years, and was often called the cradle of all American actors and actresses of the early nineteenth century. Once called the Thalia Theater, it was known recently as the Chinese Theater and Oriental's looked on sadly as it burned.

CLARA BOW'S FATHER CLOSES RESTAURANT STAR FINANCED

LOS ANGELES, June 7.—"For Lease" signs have been posted on the fashionable chicken and steak establishment of Robert Bow, father of Clara.

The restaurant, situated on Beverly boulevard, one of the main arteries from Los Angeles to the sea, was opened about a year ago. Clara was a frequent visitor and at first the place did a brisk business, stimulated, no doubt, by the hope of many patrons that they would be fortunate in getting a bit of "It" first-hand.

Of, late however, the establishment is said to have been running "in the red" and its closing followed.

"Yes, I loaned my father the money to invest in his restaurant," Clara readily admits. "It was purely a business proposition. I considered him a good risk. And as far as that goes, I still do."

Reports that Mr. Bow had planned to use his famous daughter's name to stimulate trade but had been forced to give up this plan found partial confirmation at the studio.

"Yes, Mr. Bow came to us at the time he was starting his venture and told us he would like to use Clara's name in that connection,' one executive says. "I think he wanted to call it 'The Clara Bow Restaurant' or something like that. We told him that we felt that since Clara was not actively interested in it and had only loaned the money to finance it, we thought it would be better for him not to do so. He cheerfully agreed to comply with our wishes."

"Robert Bow's Chicken and Steak House" was the name ultimately selected for the place. A $1.25 chicken or steak dinner was featured with the added advertising feature that "all chickens are killed on the premises." It was opened at 4 p. m. daily and remained in operation until the early morning hours, catering to automobile parties going to and from the beach resorts.

A $10,000 loss is said to have been incurred before it was decided to give up the venture.
